Budget Proposal Calls For 9% Hike In Tax Expenditures

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature's Appropriations Committee Thursday gave its tentative approval to a 1976-77 state operational budget base calling for a 9% increase in state tax expenditures.

The $359 million in tentatively approved general fund expenditures will be presented to the Legislature in the form of a budget bill, and serve as the starting point for 1976 budget decisions.

State agencies had requested about $405 million in general fund appropriations. The most comparable figure for the current fiscal year is about $329 million.

All figures were supplied by the legislative fiscal staff.

The budget bill will be introduced next month in the Legislature, then be subjected to public hearings before the committee. At that time, state agencies can plead for more funds.

Some $11 million for the projected $30 million hike in general fund expenditures would go to the University of Nebraska.

The committee's bill also contemplates tuition increases both at the university and at the state colleges if those institutions are to fully realize their total budgeted funds for the fiscal year which begins next July.

Basic tuition costs at NU campuses were projected to rise from $18 to $20 per credit hour for resident students, and from $48.5 to $54 per credit hour for non-residents.

State college tuition rates were pegged at $17 per credit hour for residents and $30 per credit hour for non-residents. They now stand at $15.50 and $27.50, respectively.

It will be left to governing boards to institute the tuition rate hikes if they wish to raise the full amount of funding allowed in the budget.

The tentative general fund budget for NU was set at $88.4 million, compared to about $77 million for the current fiscal year. The university request hovered at $100 million.

The Lincoln campus general fund budget would jump from $43.5 million to $46.3 million.

University of Nebraska at Omaha funding would rise from $11.0 million to $11.4 million.

At the Medical Center in Omaha, general fund support would increase from $18.9 million to $26.8 million. That includes $2.8 million in state tax support to replace lost federal funds.

The NU budget envisions an increase in faculty workload both at Lincoln and at UNO. That projection cut some $2.8 million from the budget totals.

Sen. Shirley Marsh of Lincoln attempted to restore faculty workload figures to their current level, and thereby add the $2.8 million to the budget totals, but her effort fell one vote short of approval.

That issue will again be considered when the committee discusses the budget bill in January.

Mrs. Marsh did win 5-2 approval to add $5.4 million to the originally considered NU budget base to fund programs which appeared to have prior legislative approval. That included $5.3 million in general fund money, the largest item of which was the $2.8 million replacement of lost federal funds at the Medical Center.

The committee made a tentative decision to continue its current system of budgeting specific figures to NU campuses and programs. The university has requested a lump sum appropriation to be distributed among campuses and programs by the Board of Regents.

The four state colleges at Chadron, Kearney, Peru and Wayne were given a general fund budget base of about $12.6 million compared to the current spending level of $12.2 million.

The colleges had requested about $15.1 million.

A $44.2 million general fund budget recommendation for the Department of Public Welfare compares to current spending of $42.1 million and a request of $49.7 million.

The recommended $28.7 million general fund appropriation for the Department of Public Institutions compares to a 1975-76 spending level of $27.9 million and a request of $38.0 million.

The Department of Correctional Services was tentatively budgeted at $11.6 million compared to a current spending level of $10.3 million and a request of $12.7 million.

State aid for technical community colleges was budgeted at $10.6 million, compared to $12.6 million for the current year and a $14.5 million request.

The committee will consider unresolved budget issues in January after the 1976 Unicameral convenes, Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings pointed out.

In order to pinpoint some issues for discussion, the committee virtually wiped out funding for the state office of programming and planning and all programs under the Crime Commission except the law enforcement training center.

In other action, the committee verified its earlier decision to boost state contributions for employe life and health insurance policies to $20 a month.

That represents a hike from the current $12.50 a month per employe. When the increase was initially approved, the committee thought the current contribution was $15.

Ford Supports Fight Against Birth Defects

Washington (UPI) — With Arnold Palmer and a crippled 6-year-old girl at his side, President Ford urged all citizens Thursday to join him in supporting "March of Dimes Birth Defects Prevention Month" in January.

Ford said more than 200,000 American babies suffer birth defects each year and "many can be prevented if we effectively apply present knowledge and strengthen current prenatal and postnatal services. We must do so now if we are to reduce human suffering and costs to society in the future."

The President issued his appeal in a written statement and, after signing it, gave his pen to Tammy Patterson, a blonde, blue-eyed 1st-grader from Mt. Pleasant, Tenn. She is a victim of multiple birth defects and was chosen as the 1976 March of Dimes "national poster child."

Palmer, the pro golfer whose father had polio as a child, has been honorary national chairman of the annual March of Dimes fund-raising campaigns for five years, and became a trustee of the voluntary health organization in 1973.

Tammy, who has undergone two spinal operations and is able to walk with the aid of half-leg braces, seemed delighted with so much attention when Ford held her in his arms for photographs.

Veto Override Fails

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Thursday sustained President Ford's veto of a tax cut extension bill and last-minute maneuvering raised doubts Congress could act in time to stop a tax hike for the most Americans on Jan. 1.

Democratic leaders said they would take no further action on legislation to extend 1975 tax cuts until Ford spelled out his proposals for the coming fiscal year's federal budget. They also cancelled Congress' year-end holiday recess that had been scheduled to begin Friday.

Ford said he was confident Congress would act "in the 13 days remaining in 1975" to prevent the average worker's taxes from increasing $3 to $4 a week.

For a family of four, the death of the tax cut bill would force a man earning $15,000 a year and supporting a wife and child to pay an additional $4.73 a week in withholding or about $250 more in yearly income taxes, Internal Revenue Service records show.

Ford, who vetoed the bill because it did not impose a federal spending ceiling, was described as "pleased" by the 265 to 157 House tally that fell 17 votes short of the two-thirds necessary to override a presidential veto.

The cancellation of the Christmas recess by the Democrats apparently left the next move up to Ford. House Speaker Carl Albert said Congress will "be ready to act at any time the President submits us the information we think we need."

Albert said Democrats rejected Ford's demand for a $395 billion federal spending ceiling because they did not "know what the $395 billion means."

The Senate Democratic caucus earlier in the day instructed Sens. Russell Long of Louisiana and Edmund S. Muskie of Maine to meet with their House counterparts to seek a compromise.

However, Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, was decidedly pessimistic about any chances for a compromise. "Taxes will go up in January," the Oregon Democrat said.

Ford vetoed the bill because it failed to impose a ceiling on federal spending. Ford said Congress should approve before the end the year a bill which "recognizes the basic truth: the only honest way to reduce taxes is to reduce the spending of tax money."

onest way to reduce taxes is to reduce the spending of tax money."

Democratic leaders later said Congress would take no further action on tax cut legislation until Ford spells out precisely what he wants in next year's budget.

House Speaker Carl Albert said Congress would not formally adjourn for the year as scheduled on Friday. Albert said the House and Senate would meet every three days during the holiday recess and await Ford's recommendations for further action.

Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, at first said he wanted to take the vetoed bill and add some conciliatory words involving spending to win approval.

The Louisiana Democrat said the language simply would put Congress on record as being favorably inclined to consider a federal spending ceiling. It would not be an ironclad commitment because Congress' new budget procedures will deal with the details next year, he said.

Long expressed hope the gesture would please Ford and gain the President's approval for continuing the tax cuts or, if there was another veto, turn enough votes around in the House to override a second veto.

Such a maneuver would begin in the Senate, Long said, possibly by attaching such a carbon copy of the vetoed measure, plus the spending language, to some minor revenue measure already passed by the House.

The Democratic committee chairmen later rejected this approach in favor of awaiting Ford's budget recommendations.

Ullman, meantime, told reporters he would not oppose letting such a Senate-passaged package reach the House floor, although he thinks the ultimate result would be the same.

At a caucus, the Senate Democrats instructed Long and Muskie, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee to huddle with Ullman and House Budget Committee Chairman Brock Adams, D-Wash., and discuss the possibilities of coming up with something.

The President lacks "Authority to take executive action to keep tax withholding at current levels," an administration spokesman said, meaning that only Congress can act to provide Americans the tax cuts through the first six months of 1976.

Ford's action, said AFL-CIO President George Meany, "has raised the taxes of most Americans., endangered the economy and insured hardship for millions."

'Power To Grant Immunity Vital'

By BOB GUENTHER

A spokesman for the Nebraska Commission on Judicial Qualifications asked the Legislature's Judiciary Committee Thursday for emergency powers to grant witnesses immunity from prosecution in exchange for testimony.

Ben Novicoff, a Nebraska Workmen's Compensation Court judge and member of the 11-person commission, told the committee there is "a definite need" for the immunity power.

The commission, a constitutional body, investigates allegations of misconduct by state and local judges. All commission proceedings and records are confidential. Actions against individual judges are filed with the Nebraska Supreme Court.

Without the power to grant immunity, Novicoff said the commission will not be able to get certain testimony concerning possible misconduct.

The nature of Novicoff's request led some present to believe the power is needed for an investigation pending before the commission.

Asked if immunity would help get testimony in a pending matter, Novicoff responded, "I can't tell you. All of our hearings are confidential."

He asked committee members to insert the needed language in an existing bill and to attach the emergency clause so it would become effective upon enactment.

Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett expressed some misgivings about such action. He cited the fact the 1976 Legislature will be a short one (60 days) and that 130-140 bills are now on file.

In the past, the Judiciary Committee has been criticized for introducing too many bills. Barnett said the committee was just doing its job.

Novicoff said the commission will be able to exist without the immunity power, "but there is a definite need for it."

In other business, the committee delayed a decision on whether to introduce a bill allowing the Winnebago Indians in Thurston and Dixon Counties to retrocede from state criminal and civil jurisdiction.

Two committee members, Sens. John DeCamp of Neligh and William Nichol, expressed opposition to such a bill.

Fire Victim's Spirit Alive As Family Gathers

By TOM COOK

Central City — It had been several years since Phillip Bolling had shared Christmas with his older brother and five younger sisters, and he was looking forward to it.

Even though a tragic explosion and fire in Central City Wednesday took the life of the "teaser in the family," Phillip Bolling's spirit was very much alive as the family gathered Thursday — a week earlier than planned.

"All of us girls loved him. He could make the best of any situation," his sister Catherine Blodgett, who is the only other member of the family still in Central City, said.

Mrs. Blodgett remembers her brother getting teased at school because he had to wear overalls when the family was growing up on a rural Central City farm.

"But he could take it. It didn't bother him a bit. He was always proud he was raised on a farm," she said.

Phillip developed a good sense of humor and learned to give back as much mischief as he got, Mrs. Blodgett said.

As serious about working as he was about having fun, Mrs. Blodgett said her brother was a selfmade man, who worked at various grocery stores before opening his meat locker in 1962.

Mrs. Blodgett said Phillip's wife and 10 children Laura, 25, Charlotte, 22, Chris, 20, Russ, 19, Tim, 18, Janann, 17, Andy, 16, twin brothers Mark and Matt, 13, and Tricia, 9, are a strong, close-knit family and will survive the tragedy as her brother would have wanted.

State Fire Marshal Martin Dineen said Thursday the cause of the explosion at the rear of Bolling's locker plant was undetermined.

The explosion and subsequent fire destroyed a full block in downtown Central City. Fire Chief Rusty Fuehrer was still on the job Thursday supervising the demolition of the debris that was once thriving businesses.

Fuehrer praised firefighters from 15 neighboring communities who helped put out the blaze and singled out the Merrick County sheriff's office for handling communications.

Even as the rubble was being carted away, plans were begun to help the city recover from the disaster.

Central City Mayor Joe Lamb said the whole community was shocked by Bolling's death. He added that damages will be the worst in Central City history.

The city will request federal disaster relief funds if the merchants who lost their businesses decide they need it, Lamb said.

"Once we qualify whether that's the route the people who lost their businesses want to go, we'll pursue it," he said.

At a Chamber of Commerce meeting Thursday, Bob Eversoll, president of the retail committee, said Central City merchants will do everything they can to help businessmen rebuild. He also said there are enough vacant buildings to temporarily house many of them.

Central City businessmen must organize to make sure the tragedy doesn't affect the future economic well being of the community, he said.

Eversoll said business has already been affected adversely by news of the tragedy.

"We need to let people know that only about a tenth of the retail businesses were affected by the fire," he said. "It's a cruel thing to think about, but we have to be realistic and realize we have a responsibility to the community."

Jackson Hosted Rowdy Holiday

By BARBARA CRAIG

Andrew Jackson once said: "I knew a little boy who not only never heard of Christmas, but never had a toy in his life. And after the death of his mother, he had neither home nor friends."

Now Jackson did not identify that young man, but he was talking about himself. Despite his public image as a crusty old military campaigner, he had a warm spot in his heart for children, and for Christmas.

During the Jackson years at the White House, Christmas was always a most important day. In 1835, "Old Hickory" hosted what was probably the merriest Christmas party ever held at the White House. There was actually a snowball fight in the official home of the seventh president of the United States.

Prior to the gala celebration, Jackson himself personally visited the homes of friends in Washington, and invited their children to what he called "A Christmas Day Frolic."

There were always swarms of children at the White House when Jackson lived there. They included the two children of Jackson's adopted son, Andrew Jackson, Jr. The youngsters were Andrew III, and Rachel.

In addition, the President's nephew, Andrew Jackson Donelson, his wife, Emily, and their three children, Jackson, 9, John, 3, and Rachel, 18-months, lived at the White House. Donelson was the President's private secretary.

For the record, it should be noted that Old Hickory personally assisted the Jackson and Donelson children when they hung up their stockings on Christmas Eve in 1835. In fact, he reportedly hung up one of his own too.

At the frolic the following afternoon, there was singing and dancing and games. Vice President Martin Van Buren delighted the youngsters — there were more than 20 of them at the Christmas party — by playing "Blind Man's Bluff" with them, and cabinet members joined in "Hide and Seek".

At exactly six o'clock, the Marine Band played "The President's March," and Jackson came in. This was his first appearance at the party, and he had a gift for every youngster in a large bag.

Then the servants carried in trays of "unburnable snowballs" and distributed them among the children. They were actually "starch coated cotton", and were hollow on the inside, so that French candy would pop out when they were tossed.

The President decided to have them made for the party when his nephew, Jackson, the eldest of the Donelson children, expressed a desire to spend some time in Maine so he could participate in "one of those harmless snowball battles" he had heard so much about.

In short order, snowballs were being tossed all over the White House, and, to add to the noise made by the young people, and the happy adults watching them, a thunder and lightning storm broke out. It is doubtful if political Washington ever had a noisier Christmas Day.

Thus did Old Hickory spend Christmas Day, 1835. He was once described as "the tenderest, most patient of men at his own fireside."

Budget Proposal Calls For 9% Hike In Tax Expenditures

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature's Appropriations Committee Thursday gave its tentative approval to a 1976-77 state operational budget base calling for a 9% increase in state tax expenditures.

The $359 million in tentatively approved general fund expenditures will be presented to the Legislature in the form of a budget bill, and serve as the starting point for 1976 budget decisions.

State agencies had requested about $405 million in general fund appropriations. The most comparable figure for the current fiscal year is about $329 million.

The committee's bill also contemplates tuition increases both at the university and at the state colleges if those institutions are to fully realize their total budgeted funds for the fiscal year which begins next July.

Basic tuition costs at NU campuses were projected to rise from $18 to $20 per credit hour for resident students, and from $48.5 to $54 per credit hour for non-residents.

State college tuition rates were pegged at $17 per credit hour for residents and $30 per credit hour for non-residents. They now stand at $15.50 and $27.50, respectively.

It will be left to governing boards to institute the tuition rate hikes if they wish to raise the full amount of funding allowed in the budget.

The tentative general fund budget for NU was set at $88.4 million, compared to about $77 million for the current fiscal year. The university request hovered at $100 million.

The Lincoln campus general fund budget would jump from $43.5 million to $46.3 million.

University of Nebraska at Omaha funding would rise from $11.0 million to $11.4 million.

At the Medical Center in Omaha, general fund support would increase from $18.9 million to $26.8 million. That includes $2.8 million in state tax support to replace lost federal funds.

The NU budget envisions an increase in faculty workload both at Lincoln and at UNO. That projection cut some $2.8 million from the budget totals.

Sen. Shirley Marsh of Lincoln attempted to restore faculty workload figures to their current level, and thereby add the $2.8 million to the budget totals, but her effort fell one vote short of approval.

That issue will again be considered when the committee discusses the budget bill in January.

Mrs. Marsh did win 5-2 approval to add $5.4 million to the originally considered NU budget base to fund programs which appeared to have prior legislative approval. That included $5.3 million in general fund money, the largest item of which was the $2.8 million replacement of lost federal funds at the Medical Center.

The committee made a tentative decision to continue its current system of budgeting specific figures to NU campuses and programs. The university has requested a lump sum appropriation to be distributed among campuses and programs by the Board of Regents.

The four state colleges at Chadron, Kearney, Peru and Wayne were given a general fund budget base of about $12.6 million compared to the current spending level of $12.2 million.

The colleges had requested about $15.1 million.

A $44.2 million general fund budget recommendation for the Department of Public Welfare compares to current spending of $42.1 million and a request of $49.7 million.

The recommended $28.7 million general fund appropriation for the Department of Public Institutions compares to a 1975-76 spending level of $27.9 million and a request of $38.0 million.

The Department of Correctional Services was tentatively budgeted at $11.6 million compared to a current spending level of $10.3 million and a request of $12.7 million.

State aid for technical community colleges was budgeted at $10.6 million, compared to $12.6 million for the current year and a $14.5 million request.

Committee members stressed that this week's decisions are not final.

In order to pinpoint some issues for discussion, the committee virtually wiped out funding for the state office of programming and planning and all programs under the Crime Commission except the law enforcement training center.

In other action, the committee verified its earlier decision to boost state contributions for employe life and health insurance policies to $20 a month.

That represents a hike from the current $12.50 a month per employe. When the increase was initially approved, the committee thought the current contribution was $15.

Central City Mayor Joe Lamb said the whole community was shocked by Bolling's death. He added that damages will be the worst in Central City history.

The city will request federal disaster relief funds if the merchants who lost their businesses decide they need it, Lamb said.

"Once we qualify whether that's the route the people who lost their businesses want to go, we'll pursue it," he said.

At a Chamber of Commerce meeting Thursday, Bob Eversoll, president of the retail committee, said Central City merchants will do everything they can to help businessmen rebuild. He also said there are enough vacant buildings to temporarily house many of them.

Central City businessmen must organize to make sure the tragedy doesn't affect the future economic well being of the community, he said.

Eversoll said business has already been affected adversely by news of the tragedy.

"We need to let people know that only about a tenth of the retail businesses were affected by the fire," he said. "It's a cruel thing to think about, but we have to be realistic and realize we have a responsibility to the community."

Jackson Hosted Rowdy Holiday

By BARBARA CRAIG

Andrew Jackson once said: "I knew a little boy who not only never heard of Christmas, but never had a toy in his life. And after the death of his mother, he had neither home nor friends."

Now Jackson did not identify that young man, but he was talking about himself. Despite his public image as a crusty old military campaigner, he had a warm spot in his heart for children, and for Christmas.

During the Jackson years at the White House, Christmas was always a most important day. In 1835, "Old Hickory" hosted what was probably the merriest Christmas party ever held at the White House. There was actually a snowball fight in the official home of the seventh president of the United States.

Prior to the gala celebration, Jackson himself personally visited the homes of friends in Washington, and invited their children to what he called "A Christmas Day Frolic."

There were always swarms of children at the White House when Jackson lived there. They included the two children of Jackson's adopted son, Andrew Jackson, Jr. The youngsters were Andrew III, and Rachel.

In addition, the President's nephew, Andrew Jackson Donelson, his wife, Emily, and their three children, Jackson, 9, John, 3, and Rachel, 18-months, lived at the White House. Donelson was the President's private secretary.

For the record, it should be noted that Old Hickory personally assisted the Jackson and Donelson children when they hung up their stockings on Christmas Eve in 1835. In fact, he reportedly hung up one of his own too.

At the frolic the following afternoon, there was singing and dancing and games. Vice President Martin Van Buren delighted the youngsters — there were more than 20 of them at the Christmas party — by playing "Blind Man's Bluff" with them, and cabinet members joined in "Hide and Seek".

At exactly six o'clock, the Marine Band played "The President's March," and Jackson came in. This was his first appearance at the party, and he had a gift for every youngster in a large bag.

Then the servants carried in trays of "unburnable snowballs" and distributed them among the children. They were actually "starch coated cotton", and were hollow on the inside, so that French candy would pop out when they were tossed.

The President decided to have them made for the party when his nephew, Jackson, the eldest of the Donelson children, expressed a desire to spend some time in Maine so he could participate in "one of those harmless snowball battles" he had heard so much about.

In short order, snowballs were being tossed all over the White House, and, to add to the noise made by the young people, and the happy adults watching them, a thunder and lightning storm broke out. It is doubtful if political Washington ever had a noisier Christmas Day.

Thus did Old Hickory spend Christmas Day, 1835. He was once described as "the tenderest, most patient of men at his own fireside."

Republican Senators To Block Aid Cutoff

Washington (UPI) — Despite furious White House lobby pressure, the Senate Thursday refused to approve more covert aid to anti-Soviet forces in Angola. Republicans mounted a filibuster to keep that aid going.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said the Republican drive to block action on legislation cutting off Angolan aid could force him to keep the Senate in session, arguing Angolan policy, through Christmas.

"It is very apparent that a filibuster is in effect," Mansfield said after Republicans, apparently following White House orders, repeatedly blocked his attempts to set a time limit on the Angolan aid debate.

Assistant Senate Republican leader Robert Griffin, fresh from a White House conference with President Ford, objected every time Mansfield proposed a time for voting on Sen. John V. Tunney's anti-aid amendment. Tunney's bill would prohibit any of the $112.4 billion defense bill from use as covert support for Angolan factions.

Mansfield apologized to senators who might have to cancel Christmas travel reservations but said he intended to keep the chamber at work until it resolves the "very serious issue" of U.S. involvement in Angola. Congress is scheduled to begin its recess Friday.

McClellan Calls Ford

Trying to break the stalemate, Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., called Ford and reportedly suggested the President give the Senate a written pledge to spend no more funds on Angola without the approval of McClellan's Appropriations Committee.

Senate sources said McClellan could not at first reach the President by phone with his proposal, which would also require any Angola aid approved in committee to get full Senate approval as well. But the sources said Ford called McClellan back almost immediately.

Shortly after that, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger arrived at the Capitol with a bevy of aides and met with a large group of senators in the office of Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott.

Those meeting with Kissinger — presumably for discussion of the Angola issue — included such anti-aid leaders as Tunney and Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, as well as Republican supporters of the administration policy.

The filibuster threat developed after the Senate voted 72 to 26 against an administration-backed proposal that would have continued covert military and financial aid to favored factions in the Angolan civil war.

The defeated bill, authored by Griffin, would also have prohibited any U.S. civilian or military personnel from taking part in the Angolan fighting — a compromise that made no dent in Senate opposition to any U.S. involvement.

That set up a showdown over the Tunney bill, and the Republican counterattack.

Two-Hour Debate

The Senate defeated the Griffin bill after it completed its second secret Angola debate in two days. This one ran two hours behind locked doors and Ford used the time to bring full pressure to bear against any congressional cutoff of covert Angolan aid.

He called Griffin to the White House and, according to congressional sources, passed orders for Republican senators to block aid cutoff legislation any way they can — by filibuster if necessary.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., told reporters he was "prepared to talk for a long time" to block passage of the Tunney amendment.

Tunney said half a dozen White House lobbyists were waiting outside the chamber doors to pressure senators as they emerged from the secret debate.

Administration sources disclosed Wednesday Ford is trying to persuade Moscow to break off its program of military and financial support for one of the three warring Angolan factions — support that reportedly includes an airlift of Soviet military supplies and an estimated 5,000 Cuban troops.

The administration refused to disclose the extent or type of the countering U.S. aid. It reportedly totals at least $50 million in military equipment and money.

Congressional sources said the White House lobbyists argued that a cutoff of U.S. aid might lead the Russians to believe they can win a test of nerve with the United States in Africa.

6-Year Pact OKd On Grain Shipping

Moscow (UPI) — The Soviet Union and the United States reached final agreement Thursday on a long-term shipping accord expected to put dozens of idle American cargo vessels back to work.

The six-year agreement, which negotiators said "will facilitate the expanding trade between the two countries," was initialed after settling a last-minute dispute over costs of shipping U.S. grain to Soviet ports.

The Soviet Union, which reportedly has bought 20 million tons of American grain this year to make up for a disastrous domestic harvest, agreed Sept. 17 to let U.S. ships carry at least a third of the grain purchases until 1981.

The negotiators agreed at the time on a $16-a-ton shipping rate, but earlier this month the Soviets refused to pay more than the world charter rate, a substantially lower figure.

The U.S. negotiator, Robert Blackwell, assistant secretary of state for maritime affairs, rejected the demand as "totally unacceptable" because of the higher costs of operating American ships.

Thursday's joint statement, which endorsed "the rate arrangements of Sept. 17, 1975," indicated the Soviets had backed down.

Blackwell has said the use of American ships for a third of the Soviet grain shipments could put 38 laid-up American tankers back to work.

The agreement was reached in talks Wednesday and Thursday between Blackwell and Igor Averin, chief of administration for foreign relations of the Soviet Merchant Marine Ministry.

Ford Okays Loans To New York City

Washington (UPI) — President Ford signed into law a bill appropriating $2.3 billion in short-term loans to New York City Thursday and the government arranged to make the first loans — for $130 million — immediately to enable the city to meet Friday's payroll.

Robert A. Gerard, deputy assistant secretary of the Treasury for financial resources, said the loan would be made at once through the electronic transfer of $130 million from the Treasury's account at the Federal Reserve Bank in New York to the city's account.

Although the city might have defaulted if the loan were not made immediately, there was no sense of urgency in the day's events. The loan had been promised and anticipated, and Gerard said the loan was authorized even though the formalities were not completed.

The law establishing the loan program required Treasury Secretary William E. Simon to determine "there is a reasonable prospect of repayment" before loans could be made. Gerard said the examination of New York's financial plans to meet that requirement will not be completed much before Dec. 31.

The city must pay interest on the loans of 1% above what the federal government pays when it borrows.

The loan money was contained in a catchall $10.3-billion appropriation bill which also carried $5 billion for unemployment compensation benefits, $1.75 billion for food stamps and funds for a number of other government programs. Ford signed it without any ceremony or statement.

Under the program, New York State, on behalf of the city, will be able to borrow up to $2.3 billion to cover short periods during the next 30 months when its expenditures exceed tax collections, which come in sporadically.

Loans must be repaid at the end of each fiscal year, and Simon is authorized to refuse to make a loan any time he feels there is a "reasonable" likelihood the city will not be able to repay.

In Congress, where up to $7 billion in federally guaranteed loans for up to 19 years were proposed, some supporters of the city felt the loan program might be inadequate and the city would still default on its obligations, go into bankruptcy and come under the financial control of a federal judge.

Air Force Officers In Argentina Call For Overthrow

Buenos Aires, Argentina (UPI) — A group of air force officers revolted against the government of President Isabel Peron Thursday, seizing two of Argentina's six air bases and sending military planes buzzing over Buenos Aires.

"Our objective is to overthrow the government," a rebel officer told United Press International in a telephone interview from the rebel-held Moron Air Base west of the capital.

The mutinous officers earlier kidnaped air force commander Lt. Gen. Hector Luis Fautario and held him for seven hours before releasing him unharmed.

Defense Minister Tomas Vottero, attempting to appease the rebels, announced Fautario — a key supporter of Mrs. Peron — would be removed as air force commander but did not say who would replace him.

"That doesn't change a thing," the rebel officer said angrily.

"Our objective is to overthrow the government. This is not an air force matter, it's a national problem."

Four warplanes and a helicopter flew low over air force headquarters in downtown Buenos Aires. Military sources said they were apparently from the Moron Base.

A pilot also flew over the presidential palace and tossed out pamphlets calling on Lt. Gen. Jorge Videla, the army commander, to take over the government "as an unavoidable duty to the fatherland."

The pamphlets, which bore the name of the "Argentine Air Force in Operations," urged the army and navy to join the rebels in ousting Mrs. Peron and establishing "a new order . . . with national Christian sentiments.

"Our conscience can no longer stand the humiliation and shame of standing guard for a feast of corruption, public mockery and degradation of our institutions," the pamphlets said.

The leaflets also called for "the eradication of corruption and Marxist subversion."

Brig. Gen. Jesus Cappellini, an air force officer serving on the joint chiefs of staff, was identified by both the rebels and the government as the leader of the revolt.

The insurgents claimed in the telephone interview to have the support of the Air Force 5th Brigade in San Luis province, and smaller bases at La Rioj and Comodoro Rivadavia.

The breakaway officers seized the Moron Base on the outskirts of Buenos Aires and the Mendoza Air Base, 685 miles west of the capital, gaining control of Argentina's Korean War-vintage F86 Sabrejet fighters.

Defense Minister Vottero held a series of urgent meetings with top air force, army and navy officers. Army commander Lt. Gen. Videla was reported on his way back to Argentina from Venezuela.

A mimeographed communique sent to United Press International said the insurgents were fighting to overthrow the government and eradicate "corruption and Marxist subversion."

But military sources played down the communique saying it probably came from retired air force officers and had no connection with the uprising.

Aid To Railroads Authorized

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate conferees agreed Thursday to authorize $6.5 billion to reorganize seven ailing railroads, assist other railroads and improve passenger service.

However, the negotiators had trouble resolving differences in language on several key points. There was no word when the bill would be brought to the Senate and House for a final vote.

Conferees expressed hope that the legislation could be passed before Congress recesses for Christmas.

President Ford has said he will veto the legislation unless substantial changes are made in several provisions.

The conferees refused to cut funding for improving passenger service in the northeast corridor between Washington and Boston to the level proposed by the administration.

The compromise authorization is $500 million more than the amount contained in the House-passed bill and $2.1 billion less than the Senate authorized figure.

It calls for spending $2.1 billion to reorganize the Penn Central and six other railroads into one quasi-government railroad called ConRail. Much of those funds will be used to rehabilitate the badly deteriorated track and equipment owned by the seven railroads, which currently are in bankruptcy reorganization.

The legislation also calls for spending $2.4 billion to modernize the passenger service line between Washington and Boston, to increase train speeds and cut passenger travel time.

The seven ailing railroads are the Penn Central, Erie Lackawanna, Lehigh Valley, Lehigh and Hudson River, Central of New Jersey, Ann Arbor and the Reading.

©The New York Times

New York — In a recent test of how much doctors know about prescribing antibiotics, half the 4,513 physicians around the country who voluntarily took the 50-question, multiple-choice test achieved scores of only 68 per cent or worse.

The test was said to be difficult enough to challenge the best physicians. Few doctors would be expected to know all the answers, the test's designer said, but he believes a "really good doctor" should be able to score 80%.

The questions, many involving specific clinical cases, resembled those the average doctor might have to answer in practice.

The findings said the infectious disease expert who devised the test, "brought home to me that many physicians are not as conversant with antibiotics as they ought to be."

Antibiotics, intended to combat infections, are the most widely prescribed class of drugs in the United States. They account for 15 to 20% of new and refill prescriptions annually.

The examination, called the National Antibiotic Therapy Test, was designed by Dr. Harold C. Neu with the help of eight other experts. Neu is a nationally recognized expert in infectious disease therapy who teaches at the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The test was put on a 75-minute video tape and distributed to 370 hospitals and medical schools where it could be taken via closed-circuit television by any doctor wishing to do so. Since March 1974, more than 30,000 doctors have taken the test.

The results, being published Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine, were based only on the first 4,513 doctors to take the test. Analysis of the other scores has not been made.

By using television, the doctors could watch dramatizations of cases, including interviews with patients. After each case the doctor was asked to choose the correct antibiotic from a set of alternatives. Doctors were allowed five seconds to decide, a period chosen to simulate conditions in a busy office. After marking his answer, the videotape presented a panel of experts discussing the pros and cons of the choices.

A co-author of the report was Sara P. Howrey, medical editor of the Network for Continuing Medical Education, which produced the test. The network produces and distributes a biweekly medical journal on videotape.

Analysis of the results showed that the best scores were achieved by the most recent medical graduates. Doctors who had been out of medical school for five years or less scored an average of 70% correct. Doctors with six to 15 years of practice averaged 68% and those who had been in practice more than 15 years averaged 62%.

Specialists in infectious diseases scored an average of 86%, the highest of any specialty. The poorest score of any specialty was turned in by surgeons and by obstetricians and gynecologists, both groups achieved 64%.

Because the test was voluntary, the doctors who took it cannot be construed as representative of United States medicine as a whole. Neu said that those who voluntarily submitted themselves to the test were probably among the more highly motivated of doctors.

Of the more than 4,500 doctors who took the test, the poorest score was 16%, scored by one doctor.

A typical question went like this:

"Your patient has primary syphilis and is allergic to penicillin. Which of the following regimens can you use:

"A. 4 grams of spectinomycin intramuscularly
"B. 2 grams of tetracycline per day for 15 days
"C. 2 grams of ampicillin per day for 10 days
"D. 3 grams of erythromycin per day for 5 days
"E. none of the above."

Penicillin is the first choice for treating syphilis unless the patient is allergic. In that case tetracycline is accepted as the best alternative. Yet most of the doctors taking the test did not know this. Only 48% chose "B" as the correct answer.

The test did not include cases where experts differ as to the best course of action. To be included, a question had to have one correct answer, agreed upon by a panel of eight experts.

GNP, Inflation Rises Revised

Washington (AP) — Total output of the nation's economy increased at a 13.4% annual rate in the third quarter of 1975, the largest quarterly increase in 25 years, the Commerce Department said Thursday in an updated report.

The department also issued revised figures on corporate profits in the third quarter, which showed that figured on an annual basis after-tax profits of corporations totaled $82.6 billion, a 17.5% increase from the second quarter.

The department said the last time corporate profits had increased at such a rate was in the third quarter of 1950, when they rose 22.1%.

The new figures on the nation's total economic output, as measured by the Gross National Product, marked the second time the GNP figures have been revised in the third quarter.

The Commerce Department originally reported in October that economic output had increased 11.2%, then revised this in November to 13.2%.

It said the latest revision reflected an increase in estimated income of Americans from property held abroad.

It also revised upward slightly the rate of inflation in the third quarter to 4.8%, instead of 4.7% reported in November. This measure of inflation is called the GNP implicit price deflator.

The last time the nation's economy had expanded so swiftly was in the third quarter of 1950, when the GNP increased at a 17.5% annual rate.

The Commerce Department said real GNP, which excludes the effects of inflation, was at an annual rate of $808.6 billion in the third quarter, while total GNP, including inflation, was at a rate of $1,504.4 billion.

The major cause of the big increase in corporate profits in the third quarter was the substantial rise in productivity throughout the economy as the recession came to an end and recovery got underway.

Businesses are normally slow to hire back workers when recovery from a recession begins, relying on the existing labor force to meet the growing demand for goods and services, so that there is greater output per worker.

The department estimated last month that after-tax corporate profits had increased at an annual rate of $82.2 billion, a $16.9% increase.

Profits before taxes increased by $21.3 billion in the third quarter to an annual rate of $134.6 billion.

Bodyguards Assigned To MacBride

Sacramento, Calif. (UPI) — Bodyguards were assigned Thursday to U.S. District Court Judge Thomas J. MacBride, who pronounced a life sentence on Lynette Fromme, a member of the murderous Manson cult, for trying to assassinate President Ford.

The U.S. marshal's office refused to discuss the specific reason for the protection, or details of how many deputies had been assigned or for how long.

At her sentencing Wednesday, the fiesty apostle of mass murderer Charles Manson shouted at the judge in an apparent threat, "You fool, I'm just trying to save your life. The international people's court of retribution will give you what you deserve."

Miss Fromme's roommate, Sandra Good, said Miss Fromme personally would appeal her life sentence but viewed as her chief problem the winning of a new trial for Manson.

"She will handle the appeal, and she's not even that concerned about it," Sandra Good said.

"The evidence against her is very, very flimsy That's no big problem. Her main problem is getting the whole (Manson) family out, or getting them a courtroom so they can speak."

The two women, who shared a $100-a-month attic apartment eight blocks from where Miss Fromme pointed a gun at President Ford, were among Manson's most devoted supporters when he was tried in 1970 for the Tate-LaBianca murders in Los Angeles. They still bear scars of an "X" they carved in their foreheads during the marathon vigil outside Manson's courtroom.

Defense attorney John Virga filed a notice of appeal Wednesday.

A Yuletide Amnesty?

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON — Before we come to the end of the old year, and go on to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence in 1976, is it not possible at least to think about an unconditional Christmas amnesty for the defiant exiles of the Vietnam War?

Washington is not thinking about this now. It is preoccupied with the grievances, blunders, and outrages of the past. Also, more and more, with the coming struggles of next year's presidential election. It is concerned at the moment for human liberty in Uganda, but almost seems to have no concern or even pity for its own forgotten children.

It is odd that President Ford, who has got so far by the accidents and humanity of political life, should have missed this point. When he was sworn in as president on Aug. 9, 1974, he began his inaugural speech with these words:

"My fellow Americans: Our long national nightmare is over. Our Constitution works . . . Here the people rule. But there is a higher power, by whatever name we call Him, who ordains not only righteousness but love, not only justice, but mercy."

Ten days later, on Aug. 19, 1974, in Chicago, he addressed the Veterans of Foreign Wars. "Unlike my last two precedessors," he said, "I did not enter this office facing the terrible decision of foreign war. But like President Truman and President Lincoln before me, I found on my desk . . . the urgent problem of how to bind up the nation's wounds, and I am determined to do that."

It was a good and even noble speech, and he tried to be faithful to it by offering a conditional amnesty to the Vietnam protesters. He suggested that they could work their passage back home by paying penance for wrongs they didn't admit. So they did not confess and did not come home, and at that point, the President and the Congress forgot them.

President Andrew Johnson, succeeding Lincoln, faced something of the same problem. Like Ford, he proposed a conditional amnesty after the War Between the States, and also like Ford, his compromise amnesties were rejected.

But finally, on Christmas Day, 1868, three and a half years after Appomattox, he cut across all the divisive arguments of the war with his Christmas Proclamation:

I, Andrew Johnson," he said, "President of the United States, by virtue of the power and authority in me vested by the Constitution, and in the name of the sovereign people of the United States, do hereby proclaim and declare, unconditionally, and without reservation, to all and to every person who directly or indirectly participated in the late insurrection or rebellion, a full pardon and amnesty for the offense of treason against the United States, or of adhering to their enemies during the late Civil War with restoration of all rights, privileges, and immunities under the Constitution and the laws which have been made in pursuance thereof."

Though this was a civil rather than a foreign war, Andrew Johnson's unconditional amnesty proclamation was in many ways more difficult politically for him than Ford's, but he faced it and the Congress and the nation accepted it. The tragedy now is that Ford is not even thinking about it, and neither is the Democratic Party's Congress.

Part of the problem now is that neither party here is concerning itself about the true meaning of the word "amnesty." It is not an ethical word, meaning "forgiveness," but a practical word meaning "forgetfulness." It comes from the same root as the word "amnesia," a disturbance of memory, a blotting out of the past, which was precisely what Ford seemed to be suggesting when he talked in his inaugural address about "love, justice, and mercy," and the "urgent problem of how to bind up the nation's wounds."

Things are different now, however, for Ford. He is not concentrating on "love, justice, and mercy," but on Ronald Reagan, whose compassion for the Vietnam veterans is somewhat limited, and on the Democratic presidential candidates, who are equally indifferent to this forgotten tragedy.

Actually, the plight of the 100,000 or so Vietnam exiles is really no big political issue. It is a sad story but the nation is paying no attention to it. But coming into the Bicentennial year, it could be put behind us by a Christmas amnesty. There are so many other more important questions, but none more human or tragic.

"Our long national nightmare is over," Ford said. "The urgent problem is to bind up the nation's wounds," but the nightmare won't really be over or the wounds really be bound up until our children come home.

A Gift From Uncle Scrooge

President Scrooge and a congressional minority picked the taxpayer's pocket as a Christmas gift this week. It means that the average family will have between $200 and $300 less to spend or save next year.

The only area in which President Ford is really looking good is in his battles with a heavily Democratic Congress. Only seven of forty-some of his vetoes have been overridden. He won another big one Thursday. Ford's veto of the bill extending reduced withholding tax rates through the first six months of next year was sustained. There reportedly is no chance the house will reconsider its action before adjourning for the year later today. Thus, the federal income tax withholding rate will go up as of January 1, meaning hundreds of dollars less take-home pay next year for the American wage-earner. The Congress could pass retroactive tax cuts early in the next session and hope that it could successfully buck a presidential veto, but given the track record, that seems unlikely.

The majority leadership in the House could not muster the required two-thirds of the membership to override the veto and guarantee the tax cut extension. The President's tax-raising veto was sustained by 157 members of the House, including Nebraska Republicans Charles Thone, John Y. McCollister and Virginia Smith.

So, at a time when the nation's economy was making a slow recovery from recession, when people were starting to purchase more goods and services which means more jobs for the unemployed, the Ford administration raises taxes with the consent of a congressional minority. It is an action which can only slow or reverse the recovery trend and keep unemployment figures at an unreasonably high rate.

Taxes will be raised and consumer purchasing power diminished because Ford could not win approval of a rigid ceiling on expenditures for fiscal 1977 or a guarantee of a dollar-for-dollar tax and spending cut.

But it was out of the question that Congress would willingly forfeit its appropriations powers so far in advance. Congress should not be expected to do so. The result of Ford's political power play is that Congress will implement its budget process for the next fiscal year anyway while the people suffer with a higher tax rate not of Congress' doing.

There should be no mistaking the sentiment in Congress and across the land against huge budget deficits. People want the federal budget scrutinized and fat cut away. But most thoughtful people would want budget cuts made judiciously, not arbitrarily and capriciously and prematurely.

The wiser course would have been to continue the reduced withholding rates while working on a leaner federal budget for the fiscal year beginning next fall.

Limits On Agripower

It is said that America's position in the world of the future will be staked out and maintained by agripower, our ability to efficiently produce good, wholesome food. There's not much reason to disbelieve such a notion.

But politicians, columnists and philosophers who casually chatter about the wielding of agripower would do well to explore below the surface of the idea.

Ronald Reagan is talking in terms of using our grain production capacity to force the Russians and other real or potential foes to knuckle under on points of conflict. Kevin Phillips, the columnist whose writings appear here regularly, observes that "America's agripower may eventually rival and even outstrip the vaunted petropower of the Middle East."

America's potential leverage is enormous, says Phillips, "to use food supplies and technical expertise quietly and subtly to force overseas governments to (1) retool their economies, (2) provide the United States with critical minerals and (3) make vital foreign policy concessions . . ."

The potential leverage is undeniably there, with restrictions and qualifications, however.

For one thing, it is a simple truth that the supply of agricultural produce cannot be turned on and off like a water faucet, whether it be for domesticconsumption, normal world trade or wringing foreign policy concessions from the Kremlin or anybody else.

The power plant in the agripower machine — the individual farmer and his capital sources — is going to have to have the incentive to produce and a broad understanding at least that the government will embrace a coherent production policy; that is, that calls for all-out production one year will not be followed by severe cutbacks or a flooded market the next.

In short, there will have to be some sort of buffer between the farmer and the unpredictable world of international relations if the U.S., even more than it has in the past, attempts to secure its place in the sun by holding a bag of grain over the heads of those it confronts. A buffer or other artificial devices such as sales ceilings should not be needed under normal trade circumstances.

The farmer, of course, would hope he could produce food for domestic and world markets in which trade was not conditioned on politics and blackmail.

But such conditions are a certainty if agripower becomes the ultimate weapon in our diplomatic arsenal.

If that is indeed the case, all signs point to the need for the government to get back into the grain buying and storing business in a big way — to increase government-owned stocks — so that there will be an appropriate measure of market stability.

That is not a particularly desirable situation but it looks like that is what will have to happen.

Soviets Seek Out Scapegoats

WASHINGTON — Many years ago and in a moment of candor, a Soviet official gave me an example of communism's industrial methods. There was, he said, a shortage in the USSR of tenpenny nails. The manager of a factory producing these nails was ordered to triple his production. But nothing was done to triple his allocation of the necessary metals.

The factory manager sought desperately to get the materials he needed — through regular channels or under-the-counter from other factories — but he failed

His solution was to produce nails one-third in size to what was in short supply. The commissars in Moscow, who didn't know one nail from another, hailed him for meeting the new quotas — and the shortage in tenpenny nails was aggravated.

This is but one way in which the economic planners of the Kremlin meet the goals set by each successive five-year plan. The most effective method, however, has been to falsify the figures.

But the time comes when such falsification runs out of paper and the Kremlin must admit that Soviet production is in a bad way. In the past, shortfalls have been blamed on "Trotskyite" saboteurs or to the remnants of czarist society. But this has grown more awkward with the passage of time.

Can they blame it all on Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn?

Is the scapegoat the reactionary weather which, either too good or too bad, continues to decimate the Soviet Union's grain harvests?

In their last five-year plan, Soviet leaders promised the people that there would be an increase of some 10% in the production of consumer goods — not very much considering the low base from which they were starting. In the year now ending, however, the consumer sector grew by 2.7% — and this in goods whose shoddiness and instant obsolesence even Soviet boss Leonid Brezhnev has plaintively conceded.

Industrial growth has been the slowest since 1946, and the agricultural sector is a disaster area — that reactionary weather again! — compelling the Kremlin to stave off famine by importing wheat and other grains at an uprecedented rate.

The Soviet grain harvest, which was to have been 215 million tons slumped to 160 million tons — though the Ukraine was once Europe's greatest breadbasket — and the prediction is that it will be worse next year.

After more than five decades of "socialist planning," the Soviet Union has the world's worst distribution system among industrial nations, and a rate of productivity which makes even British socialism look good. Only on Washington's subway construction project do more men stand about, collecting wages and doing nothing.

Under these circumstances, it is easy to understand why the Soviets are so keen for the one-side detente which Secretary of State Henry Kissinger preaches — a detente which Comrade Brezhnev might well sum up as "What's mine is mine and what's yours is mine." The response of hard-nosed capitalists when the Soviets seek our grain and our technological know-how should be, "Don't call us, we'll call you."

Angola Bodes Ill For Namibia

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa — The chaotic Angolan civil war between rival guerrilla groups and their sponsors in this vast territory's northern neighbor scares the wits out of almost everyone here.

South-West Africa — which will probably gain its independence within the next three years — is called Namibia by most of its non-white inhabitants, who comprise 90% of the population. And Namibians, white, black and brown, are aware that for better or worse, the pace of events here has been hastened by the Angolan mess.

South Africa administers Namibia "illegally", according to virtually all U.N. members, including the United Stetes. It would like to shed the burden and ameliorate relations with the outer world. Pretoria therefore quietly urges its local representatives to move things along. One result has been that early this month apartheid measures were eased, with non-whites for the first time admitted to major hotels and restaurants and many public segregation signs taken down.

That may seem like small potatoes abroad but its symbolic value is both plain and important. Now, in almost every corner save some bleak Afrikaner farms and those old German households where Hitler's picture still hangs opposite Kaiser Wilhelm's, one hears the demand for change. (South-West Africa was a German colony until World War I.)

Dirk Mudge, who as senior elected member of the administration is a kind of acting prime minister, says: "Angola worries us. We are going to have a rough time in the future. People will undoubtedly be coming across our borders with the intention of trying to bring anarchy. We are going to be the victims of psychological warfare.

"But if we have a real civil war here, it will be awful. It won't be like Angola where the Portuguese ran out. Few of our whites will leave: They will stay and if necessary they will fight. I am not in favor of force. Why kill people to solve a problem?

"Angola has made all people here, white and black, more realistic. The blacks don't want to risk failure of immediate independence. And the whites now see they can't be complacent any more. Thus Angola has had a positive effect."

Daniel Tjongarero, an intelligent Herero tribesman who is a member of SWAPO (South-West African People's Organization) and the Namibian National Council — both opposing the administration — agrees: "Angola is an object lesson of what not to do. But it has also, to some extent, pushed South Africa to act. Now our council (the N.N.C.) seeks unity among the non-white groups in this country to avoid a split-up similar to that which has occurred in Angola."

Restless uncertainty prevails. The blacks want to terminate the white tribal dictatorship but all except the Ovambos (47% of the population) wish to avoid a black tribal dictatorship by the latter. The Ovambos dominate SWAPO whose gunmen almost certainly murdered a collaborationist Ovambo chief.

The whites want to retain about 60% of the land although they represent less than 12% of the population. The warlike Hereros (7.4% of the population) already have twice as much land as the Ovambos and want lots more.

A constitutional conference met here under government auspices in September and will convene again next year to prepare the road to peaceful independence. SWAPO sneers at this and has prepared its own "discussion paper" for a constitution, asking a republic, with English as the official language, non-alignment and protection of "human rights" for all ethnic groups.

They demand as a start withdrawal of South African security forces, release of political prisoners and return of political exiles. They want elections under U.N. supervision and also South African cession of its enclave at Walvis Bay.

The crucial difference is that SWAPO urges a "unitary state" in which the entire population would be welded together whereas the white-sponsored conference wants a "federated" nation comprising different ethnic groups with local rights.

Nobody demurs with Mudge's suggestion that "we must work out a formula making it possible for everyone to live together" but SWAPO emphatically disagrees that "immediate independence would be a disaster because our economy would be ruined and there would be civil war."

How long can the luxury of this debate continue against the contrapuntal thunder of Angolan events? One thing everyone in Namibia can hear behind him nowadays is the sound of time's winged chariot hurrying near from its newly independent, northern, war-torn neighbor.

Creating Of Jobs Is Not Easy

WASHINGTON — "This country is desperately short on public goods and services of the most basic nature," Sen. Hubert Humphrey said here the other day. "How ironic, how tragic it is that there are millions of idle people on the one hand and so much undone work on the other."

A day or so later, in Akron, Ohio, Chairman Arthur F. Burns of the Federal Reserve Board looked at the other side of the same coin. "If an unemployment rate of 8 or 9% is insufficient to bring inflation to a halt," he said, "then our economic system is no longer working as we once supposed."

If that is so — if there is no real "trade-off" between unemployment and inflation — then there is no true economic reason why Humphrey's lament cannot be answered by a full employment policy that would not only expand the private job market but utilize public service employment more effectively than ever before. Such a policy is the goal of the so-called Hawkins-Humphrey Bill now pending in both houses of Congress — although it will be much revised in the coming months.

The bill would declare it the policy of the government to make a decent job available to every American willing and able to work. And it would impose on every agency of the government, including the Federal Reserve Board, the necessity to do whatever would be necessary to achieve full employment. The beginning target would be to reduce the rate of unemployment — now at 8.3% — to 3% within the first 18 months.

The policy would be enforceable in at least two ways. Individual government agencies and the administration in power would have to explain and justify their monetary and fiscal actions to Congress; and American citizens would have the right to go into court to enforce their job rights. Nevertheless, the Hawkins-Humphrey bill does not as presently drawn establish vast new public service hiring programs.

Rather it imposes a full employment policy, and leaves it to the administration to find the means of implementing it. Thus, if a Ford-like administration wanted to act primarily within the private sector and with incentives to business, it could do so — as long as the necessary jobs were provided. The measure would establish, however, a Job Guarantee Office in the U.S. Employment Service and a Job Corps to provide temporary work for applicants awaiting a more permanent private or public service job.

The costs are hard to calculate, but they obviously would be substantial. On the other hand, Rep. Augustus Hawkins of California, the bill's House sponsor, points out that owing to high unemployment as much as $75 billion a year is being lost in tax revenues, $23 billion will be paid out in 1975 for unemployment benefits, and a $12 billion tax reduction has been enacted.

How much unemployment may also be costing in increased welfare benefits cannot be exactly known. Obviously, however, an effective full employment policy would be less costly in the long-run than the kind of unemployment rates envisioned — under present policies — for the rest of this decade.

Thus, the Hawkins-Humphrey Bill seems to many economists to be moving in the right direction although it is by no means a flawless instrument. One penetrating critique presented last week at a Congressional Conference on Full Employment pointed out, for example, that the bill 'still begs the crucial question of how the public sector can actually CREATE new jobs."

This view, put forward by Barry Bluestone of Boston College and Bennett Harrison of MIT, held that public service jobs, like any other, required capitalization, for which no real provision had been made. They called for new capital inflows into depressed regions and capital assistance for new enterprises and ailing business, perhaps to be provided by a national development bank; and they suggested that such capital might be found by eliminating tax incentives for foreign investment and many "unproductive" national and state business tax incentives.

These and other critics believe the Hawkins-Humphrey approach pays too little attention to structural underemployment in a technological economy; and that although it calls for local planning councils to develop and oversee job reservoirs, this effort to avoid centralized control risks an essential lack of coordination.

But the major political pitfalls are the widespread view that full — or even high — employment inevitably means inflation, and the lack of understanding that the "spending" necessary to effect such a policy would in the long-run increase revenues and reduce the federal deficit. A full employment policy, whether derived from the Hawkins-Humphrey Bill or any other, is not politically likely, therefore, unless inflation can also be controlled.

Arthur Burns may have hinted at the key to that when he said in Akron that "competition has become less intense in many of our private markets" — an apparent suggestion that corporate and union power can hold up prices and wages in spite of supply and demand.

A Yuletide Amnesty?

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON — Before we come to the end of the old year, and go on to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence in 1976, is it not possible at least to think about an unconditional Christmas amnesty for the defiant exiles of the Vietnam War?

Washington is not thinking about this now. It is preoccupied with the grievances, blunders, and outrages of the past. Also, more and more, with the coming struggles of next year's presidential election. It is concerned at the moment for human liberty in Uganda, but almost seems to have no concern or even pity for its own forgotten children.

It is odd that President Ford, who has got so far by the accidents and humanity of political life, should have missed this point. When he was sworn in as president on Aug. 9, 1974, he began his inaugural speech with these words:

"My fellow Americans: Our long national nightmare is over. Our Constitution works . . . Here the people rule. But there is a higher power, by whatever name we call Him, who ordains not only righteousness but love, not only justice, but mercy."

Ten days later, on Aug. 19, 1974, in Chicago, he addressed the Veterans of Foreign Wars. "Unlike my last two precedessors," he said, "I did not enter this office facing the terrible decision of foreign war. But like President Truman and President Lincoln before me, I found on my desk . . . the urgent problem of how to bind up the nation's wounds, and I am determined to do that."

It was a good and even noble speech, and he tried to be faithful to it by offering a conditional amnesty to the Vietnam protesters. He suggested that they could work their passage back home by paying penance for wrongs they didn't admit. So they did not confess and did not come home, and at that point, the President and the Congress forgot them.

President Andrew Johnson, succeeding Lincoln, faced something of the same problem. Like Ford, he proposed a conditional amnesty after the War Between the States, and also like Ford, his compromise amnesties were rejected.

But finally, on Christmas Day, 1868, three and a half years after Appomattox, he cut across all the divisive arguments of the war with his Christmas Proclamation:

I, Andrew Johnson," he said, "President of the United States, by virtue of the power and authority in me vested by the Constitution, and in the name of the sovereign people of the United States, do hereby proclaim and declare, unconditionally, and without reservation, to all and to every person who directly or indirectly participated in the late insurrection or rebellion, a full pardon and amnesty for the offense of treason against the United States, or of adhering to their enemies during the late Civil War with restoration of all rights, privileges, and immunities under the Constitution and the laws which have been made in pursuance thereof."

Though this was a civil rather than a foreign war, Andrew Johnson's unconditional amnesty proclamation was in many ways more difficult politically for him than Ford's, but he faced it and the Congress and the nation accepted it. The tragedy now is that Ford is not even thinking about it, and neither is the Democratic Party's Congress.

Part of the problem now is that neither party here is concerning itself about the true meaning of the word "amnesty." It is not an ethical word, meaning "forgiveness," but a practical word meaning "forgetfulness." It comes from the same root as the word "amnesia," a disturbance of memory, a blotting out of the past, which was precisely what Ford seemed to be suggesting when he talked in his inaugural address about "love, justice, and mercy," and the "urgent problem of how to bind up the nation's wounds."

Things are different now, however, for Ford. He is not concentrating on "love, justice, and mercy," but on Ronald Reagan, whose compassion for the Vietnam veterans is somewhat limited, and on the Democratic presidential candidates, who are equally indifferent to this forgotten tragedy.

Actually, the plight of the 100,000 or so Vietnam exiles is really no big political issue. It is a sad story but the nation is paying no attention to it. But coming into the Bicentennial year, it could be put behind us by a Christmas amnesty. There are so many other more important questions, but none more human or tragic.

"Our long national nightmare is over," Ford said. "The urgent problem is to bind up the nation's wounds," but the nightmare won't really be over or the wounds really be bound up until our children come home.

A Gift From Uncle Scrooge

President Scrooge and a congressional minority picked the taxpayer's pocket as a Christmas gift this week. It means that the average family will have between $200 and $300 less to spend or save next year.

The only area in which President Ford is really looking good is in his battles with a heavily Democratic Congress. Only seven of forty-some of his vetoes have been overridden. He won another big one Thursday. Ford's veto of the bill extending reduced withholding tax rates through the first six months of next year was sustained. There reportedly is no chance the house will reconsider its action before adjourning for the year later today. Thus, the federal income tax withholding rate will go up as of January 1, meaning hundreds of dollars less take-home pay next year for the American wage-earner. The Congress could pass retroactive tax cuts early in the next session and hope that it could successfully buck a presidential veto, but given the track record, that seems unlikely.

The majority leadership in the House could not muster the required two-thirds of the membership to override the veto and guarantee the tax cut extension. The President's tax-raising veto was sustained by 157 members of the House, including Nebraska Republicans Charles Thone, John Y. McCollister and Virginia Smith.

So, at a time when the nation's economy was making a slow recovery from recession, when people were starting to purchase more goods and services which means more jobs for the unemployed, the Ford administration raises taxes with the consent of a congressional minority. It is an action which can only slow or reverse the recovery trend and keep unemployment figures at an unreasonably high rate.

Taxes will be raised and consumer purchasing power diminished because Ford could not win approval of a rigid ceiling on expenditures for fiscal 1977 or a guarantee of a dollar-for-dollar tax and spending cut.

But it was out of the question that Congress would willingly forfeit its appropriations powers so far in advance. Congress should not be expected to do so. The result of Ford's political power play is that Congress will implement its budget process for the next fiscal year anyway while the people suffer with a higher tax rate not of Congress' doing.

There should be no mistaking the sentiment in Congress and across the land against huge budget deficits. People want the federal budget scrutinized and fat cut away. But most thoughtful people would want budget cuts made judiciously, not arbitrarily and capriciously and prematurely.

The wiser course would have been to continue the reduced withholding rates while working on a leaner federal budget for the fiscal year beginning next fall.

Limits On Agripower

It is said that America's position in the world of the future will be staked out and maintained by agripower, our ability to efficiently produce good, wholesome food. There's not much reason to disbelieve such a notion.

But politicians, columnists and philosophers who casually chatter about the wielding of agripower would do well to explore below the surface of the idea.

Ronald Reagan is talking in terms of using our grain production capacity to force the Russians and other real or potential foes to knuckle under on points of conflict. Kevin Phillips, the columnist whose writings appear here regularly, observes that "America's agripower may eventually rival and even outstrip the vaunted petropower of the Middle East."

America's potential leverage is enormous, says Phillips, "to use food supplies and technical expertise quietly and subtly to force overseas governments to (1) retool their economies, (2) provide the United States with critical minerals and (3) make vital foreign policy concessions . . ."

The potential leverage is undeniably there, with restrictions and qualifications, however.

For one thing, it is a simple truth that the supply of agricultural produce cannot be turned on and off like a water faucet, whether it be for domesticconsumption, normal world trade or wringing foreign policy concessions from the Kremlin or anybody else.

The power plant in the agripower machine — the individual farmer and his capital sources — is going to have to have the incentive to produce and a broad understanding at least that the government will embrace a coherent production policy; that is, that calls for all-out production one year will not be followed by severe cutbacks or a flooded market the next.

In short, there will have to be some sort of buffer between the farmer and the unpredictable world of international relations if the U.S., even more than it has in the past, attempts to secure its place in the sun by holding a bag of grain over the heads of those it confronts. A buffer or other artificial devices such as sales ceilings should not be needed under normal trade circumstances.

The farmer, of course, would hope he could produce food for domestic and world markets in which trade was not conditioned on politics and blackmail.

But such conditions are a certainty if agripower becomes the ultimate weapon in our diplomatic arsenal.

If that is indeed the case, all signs point to the need for the government to get back into the grain buying and storing business in a big way — to increase government-owned stocks — so that there will be an appropriate measure of market stability.

That is not a particularly desirable situation but it looks like that is what will have to happen.

Creating Of Jobs Is Not Easy

TOM WICKER

WASHINGTON — "This country is desperately short on public goods and services of the most basic nature," Sen. Hubert Humphrey said here the other day. "How ironic, how tragic it is that there are millions of idle people on the one hand and so much undone work on the other."

A day or so later, in Akron, Ohio, Chairman Arthur F. Burns of the Federal Reserve Board looked at the other side of the same coin. "If an unemployment rate of 8 or 9% is insufficient to bring inflation to a halt," he said, "then our economic system is no longer working as we once supposed."

West Virginia Governor, Aide Indicted In Extortion

Charleston, W. Va. (UPI) — Republican Gov. Arch Moore of West Virginia, serving his second term, was indicted Thursday with his former top aide on federal charges of extorting $25,000 from a loan company which is now in bankruptcy.

Just 90 minutes after the indictment was handed down, Moore said at a hastily called news conference he would plead "innocent" and would run for an unprecedented third term.

"I will not yield an inch," Moore said. "I am going to fight this matter They have heaped abuse on abuse on good, law abiding citizens of this state."

Moore, 52, and his former administrative assistant, William Loy, were indicted by a federal grand jury on one count each of receiving the $25,000 from the Diversified Mountaineer Corp., now in receivership, in return for a state banking charter.

The firm had been an industrial loan company with subsidiaries in Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia.

Moore, who served six terms in Congress, became the fourth governor in the history of the nation to be indicted on criminal charges while still in office. maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel, a Democrat, was indicted last month on charges of mail fraud and "activity prohibited by anti-racketeering statutes."

Moore's indictment was handed down about four hours after he had joined eight other governors, both Democrats and Republicans, in a two-hour meeting with President Ford at the White House on the financial problems facing the states.

Moore was elected chairman of the Republican Governors Conference Nov. 21, in Wichita, Kan.

Moore and Loy were charged with one count each under the Hobbs Act of conspiring to obtain the $25,000 from Theodore Price, who was president of Diversified Mountaineer Corp

If convicted, Moore and Loy could be sentenced to 20-year prison terms and fined $10,000 each.

Moore was to be arraigned Friday morning in U S. District Court in Charleston Loy's arraignment was scheduled for Monday.

The alleged conspiracy, according to the indictment, occurred in 1972 when Moore was making a bid for his second term against Democrat John D. Rockefeller IV, nephew of Vice President Nelson Rockefeller.

Although the indictment said Moore received the $25,000, the DMC never received the bank charter. The company is now in the process of liquidation.

Also named as unindicted co-conspirators were State Banking Commissioner George Jordan and Nolan B. Hamric, a member of the State Building Commission and President of the Bank of Gassaway.

Loy, an attorney, was Moore's gubernatorial assistant during his first term and was his 1972 campaign manager. Loy resigned to run for Congress in 1974 but was defeated. Moore then nominated him for a vacant federal judgeship, but withdrew the nomination after Loy was criticized for not having sufficient trial experience.

Pope Paul For Harder Drive For Converts

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI termed non-Christian religions "incomplete" Thursday and said the Roman Catholic church wanted to intensify its drive to convert those who have embraced such faiths

In a 13,000-word apostolic exhortation on evangelism in the modern world, the 78-year-old pontiff also denounced the use of arms to cure economic, social and political ills.

The Pope conveyed his church's "respect and esteem" for non-Christian religions and said "they carry with them the echo of thousands years of searching for God" He called the quest "incomplete but often made with great sincerity and righteousness of heart."

Interpol Searches For Missing Gold

Charleston, S.C. (UPI) — Interpol, the international police organization, entered an investigation Thursday into how over a half million dollars in gold bars — part of a shipment from Switzerland to Saudi Arabia — ended up in Charleston.

The gold has been stored for safe keeping in a local bank while Interpol tries to find out what happened to the other $800,000 in gold that made up the total $1.3-million shipment.

Five boxes containing 260 pounds of gold, which was consigned earlier this month from Zurich, Switzerland, to Saudi Arabia, were found here Tuesday on a plane chartered by the Air Force. Six more boxes containing 330 pounds of gold — the other $800,000 worth — which were part of the shipment from Zurich are missing.

"I mean we are searching everywhere for the remainder of the shipment from Zurich are missing.

"I mean we are searching everywhere for the remainder of the shipment," said Patrick T. O'Brien, special agent in charge of investigations for the U.S. office in Charleston.

The gold was found aboard a DC8 owned by Overseas National Airlines, a charter service based in New York. The gold was placed on the plane Dec. 6 by a Saudi Arabian airline which had chartered the aircraft.

O'Brien said the plane made 27 stops throughout Europe, the Mideast and the U S before the gold was discovered by a cargo handler at the Charleston Air Force Base

O'Brien said officials are still attempting to determine if the gold was stolen and then smuggled into this country, whether the true owner of the gold was attempting to smuggle it into this country or whether the gold was left aboard the plane by mistake.

"We don't have any definite reason to think that it just wasn't left aboard the plane by mistake except the fact that the gold left Switzerland and then was apparently missing for 10 days and yet no one even seem to be concerned about it," O'Brien said. "I mean who could just forget all that gold."

Ford May Reconsider Increase

Dearborn, Mich (UPI) — Ford Motor Co Chairman Henry Ford II said Thursday that the company might reconsider its $113 price increase if other auto companies don't follow suit with a second round of price hikes on 1976 models

At a year-end news conference at which he predicted a modest 12 to 15% sales increase in 1976, Ford said his company would have to remain competitive. He said a decision on a rollback might come after Jan. 5.

"If General Motors doesn't follow, then we'll have to look at the market and see if it's costing us sales," Ford said. "But it is something we had to do"

Broadcasters Urge FCC Drop Mileage Zones For Cable TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Association of broadcasters is urging the Federal Communications Commission to abandon its proposal to use fixed mileage zones to determine which television stations cable TV systems can carry.

The NAB urged the FCC to continue using contours in protecting the exclusivity of local stations in the same area This amounts to a line of sight restriction, but the FCC says this means completely blacking out the duplicating station

Rules put into effect in 1966 requires that a cable system located within the Grade B or higher contour of a television station, upon request of the station, must maintain the station's exclusivity as a program outlet against a lower priority or more distant signal.

The proposed FCC rule would change this so that stations licensed to major television markets would be accorded a 35-mile zone of protection Stations licensed to smaller TV station markets would be accorded an additional 20-mile zone of protection — 55 miles altogether

In its petition filed with the FCC Wednesday, the NAB said if the FCC "persists in an arbitrary course of action" and adopts such a rule, a zone of 70 miles would be "least arbitrary".

However, it said, since Grade B contours range from under 40 miles up to 100 miles, a zone of 70 miles "would overextend some stations while severely short-changing others."

"Adoption of a fixed mileage zone presupposes circular contours," the NAB said "Due to terrain factors, some station's contours do not even approximate circles"

West Virginia Governor, Aide Indicted In Extortion

Charleston, W. Va. (UPI) — Republican Gov. Arch Moore of West Virginia, serving his second term, was indicted Thursday with his former top aide on federal charges of extorting $25,000 from a loan company which is now in bankruptcy.

Just 90 minutes after the indictment was handed down, Moore said at a hastily called news conference he would plead "innocent" and would run for an unprecedented third term.

"I will not yield an inch," Moore said. "I am going to fight this matter. They have heaped abuse on abuse on good, law abiding citizens of this state."

Moore, 52, and his former administrative assistant, William Loy, were indicted by a federal grand jury on one count each of receiving the $25,000 from the Diversified Mountaineer Corp., now in receivership, in return for a state banking charter.

The firm had been an industrial loan company with subsidiaries in Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia.

Moore, who served six terms in Congress, became the fourth governor in the history of the nation to be indicted on criminal charges while still in office. maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel, a Democrat, was indicted last month on charges of mail fraud and "activity prohibited by anti-racketeering statutes."

Moore's indictment was handed down about four hours after he had joined eight other governors, both Democrats and Republicans, in a two-hour meeting with President Ford at the White House on the financial problems facing the states.

Moore was elected chairman of the Republican Governors Conference Nov. 21, in Wichita, Kan.

Moore and Loy were charged with one count each under the Hobbs Act of conspiring to obtain the $25,000 from Theodore Price, who was president of Diversified Mountaineer Corp.

If convicted, Moore and Loy could be sentenced to 20-year prison terms and fined $10,000 each.

Moore was to be arraigned Friday morning in U.S. District Court in Charleston. Loy's arriagnment was scheduled for Monday.

The alleged conspiracy, according to the indictment, occurred in 1972 when Moore was making a bid for his second term against Democrat John D. Rockefeller IV, nephew of Vice President Nelson Rockefeller.

Israelis Try To Mend Rift

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel is trying to put a happy end to a rift with Mexico that developed over attempts to better relations between the two countries

Israeli officials say relations soured over a series of misunderstandings of Mexico's voting record on Middle East subjects at the United Nations.

An effort to reverse Mexico's support of an anti-Zionist U N. resolution, which entailed a conciliatory visit here by Mexican Foreign Minister Emilio Rabasa, backfired. An angry Mexican press criticized its government for "begging Israeli forgiveness on its knees"

The Mexicans apparently were upset by the Israeli news media and some parliamentarians' failure to discern a clear change in Mexican policy in subsequent U N. votes. A boycott of Mexican holiday resorts by American Jews, regardless of the change in policy, further annoyed the Mexicans

This led to a statement by Mexican President Luis Echeverria which shocked Israeli diplomatic circles. Echeverria spoke of "minorities who expound opinions whose source lies outside Mexico"

Echeverria did not say which minorities he meant, but the Israeli Foreign Ministry took the remark as a swipe at Mexico's 40,000 Jews. As a Jewish state, Israel feels a duty to avoid diplomatic moves that might jeopardize Jews abroad

Mental Retardation Panel May Not Open Its Doors

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A five-member mental retardation panel may be directing the future of the state's retardation programs behind closed doors.

Panel members are slated to meet Jan. 12 and 13 in Lincoln.

However, Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas said Thursday the state's new open meetings law does not apply to the mental retardation panel established by a court settlement involving a lawsuit against the Beatrice State Home.

Since the panel derives its powers from the U.S. District Court and has no standing in Nebraska law, Douglas said the open meetings law does not apply.

An examination of the 21-page agreement failed to reveal any requirement that the panel's meetings be public.

Members' Decision

Arnold Carmel, director of the State Office of Mental Retardation, said the decision regarding whether the panel's meetings will be open rests with the members.

Current panel members are Dean Settle of Wichita, Kan.; Dr. Frederic L. Girardeau of Kansas City; Dr. James T. Shelton of Porterville, Calif., and Dr. Patricia Stivrins of Lincoln.

The fifth panel member, Dr. Philip Roos of Arlington, Tex., has resigned; a successor has not been chosen.

Regarding the open meeting question, Carmel said, "The only thing I can say is that determination will be made by the panel itself."

Carmel, who is assisting the panel in organizing, said from his own point of view the first meeting will be devoted to planning and orientation and will probably not be open. All subsequent meetings, he expected, will be open.

He said he will ask the panel members in a letter whether they prefer having their meetings open.

According to the lawsuit settlement, the panel is charged with drafting a plan for deciding how many of the 1,004 retarded residents of the Beatrice State Home should remain there and how many should be transferred to the programs now existing in 40 communities around the state which serve roughly 2,500 people.

Additionally, the panel must see to it that treatment and buildings at Beatrice meet federal standards.

Goes To Governor

The plan must be submitted to Gov. J. James Exon by April 13, 1976; Exon has until May 13, 1976, to accept, modify or reject the plan. The other parties to the agreement (the U.S. Justice Department and attorneys for retarded persons) can ask U.S. District Judge Albert Schatz to intervene if they disagree with Exon's actions.

The panel stemmed from a lawsuit over the civil rights of the retarded. Some believe their right to pursuit of happiness is best served in community programs, while others believe some retarded need institutions like Beatrice.

The settlement sets 250 residents as a goal for Beatrice within three years.

Comment On Gasohol Draws Sharp Protest

An announcement by Lincoln Sen. Harold Simpson that he felt the state gasohol program should be ended brought sharp protests from Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood.

During a Unicameral Appropriations Committee hearing Thursday, Simpson said the committee might wish to eliminate the state's Gasohol program.

Simpson said he had seen a report from the federal government which indicated the combination of alcohol and unleaded gasoline was not economically feasible for use as a motor fuel.

Schmit said, "I will vigorously oppose any effort to scuttle the program. It is entirely paid for by farmers who strongly support it. Killing it won't save a dime of tax money because it is entirely funded by farmers."

The funding for the program comes entirely from gas tax refunds for gasoline used in tractors and farm machinery.

"I see no reason to object to the Appropriations Committee's looking into the program," Schmit said. "I would like to see Harold's statement before I comment further, but I am not overly worried about anyone killing the program. We need all the research on alternative fuels we can get."

Gary Shults, vice chairman of the Agricultural Products Industrial Utilization Committee, which operates the gasohol program, said he knew of no government report on gasohol.

"I think someone may have given the senator an outdated report based on wet alcohol. We use anhydrous alcohol which is dry and an entirely different product," he said.

Effect Of Excise Tax Drop Unknown For Individual Bill

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

The drop in the federal excise tax on telephone bills beginning Jan. 1 will result in a $475,000 total savings to Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. customers.

However, what actual savings will be realized by the individual customer is difficult to determine, according to Bill Wylie, advertising assistant in the General Commercial Dept.

Wylie said many factors are involved in figuring the savings such as toll calls, extension and colored phones and other available services offered by LT&T.

He said almost all customers will profit from the reduction in the tax from 7 to 6%, but the savings could be less if customers cut down on toll calls, number of extensions, colored phones — all of which bring in revenue to the telephone company.

Determining what is an average customer of LT&T is difficult, Wylie said, noting that there are various types of accounts and considerable variation in services.

Wylie said that the telephone tax, which has been tacked on telephone bills off and on since World War I, is the last of the excise taxes to be removed by Congress.

The tax on telephone bills was first imposed by Congress as a "temporary measure" during World War I and was repealed briefly after the war.

However, it was reinstituted during the depression and has continued at rates as high as 15% on local service and 25% on long distance calls.

In 1971, Congress moved to eliminate the tax, which had stood at 10% for nearly 20 years. The rate will drop 1% each year until it is eliminated Jan. 1, 1982.

Burglar Takes Yule Gifts

About $200 worth of Christmas presents were among items stolen in a burglary at the Ila G. Boettcher apartment at 2701 N. 79th, according to police reports.

Other articles stolen included a television, an electric typewriter and turquoise jewelry. Value of the stolen articles totaled about $1,400.

Police said the burglary or burglars apparently slipped a credit card between the door jamb and the door to push back the bolt of the lock.

The burglary is the first this Christmas season in which the thief apparently is attracted by the sight of wrapped presents in a home, according to Inspector Roger LaPage.

S&L Institutions Request Ruling On Public Funds

Savings and loan institutions in Nebraska are asking Lancaster County District Court to decide whether public funds can be invested in savings and loan institutions.

The suit seeking the declaratory judgment was filed by the Nebraska League of Savings and Loan Associations, Commercial Federal Savings and Loan Association of Omaha, and Nebraska State Savings and Loan Association of Fremont.

Several attorney general's opinions from 1967 to 1975 have said that the state constitution prohibits the deposit of public funds in savings accounts of federally or state chartered savings and loan associations, the suit contends.

Named as defendants are Don J. Mathes, state investment officer, the Nebraska Investment Council and its chairman, E. K. Yanney, and State Treasurer Frank Marsh.

The plaintiffs are also seeking a permanent injunction enjoining the defendants from refusing to permit investment in the state's savings and loan institutions.

The refusal to permit such deposits with federally insured accounts and certificates of deposit has damaged and will continue to damage the plaintiffs, the suit contends.

Comment On Gasohol Draws Sharp Protest

An announcement by Lincoln Sen. Harold Simpson that he felt the state gasohol program should be ended brought sharp protests from Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood.

During a Unicameral Appropriations Committee hearing Thursday, Simpson said the committee might wish to eliminate the state's Gasohol program.

Simpson said he had seen a report from the federal government which indicated the combination of alcohol and unleaded gasoline was not economically feasible for use as a motor fuel.

Schmit said, "I will vigorously oppose any effort to scuttle the program. It is entirely paid for by farmers who strongly support it. Killing it won't save a dime of tax money because it is entirely funded by farmers."

The funding for the program comes entirely from gas tax refunds for gasoline used in tractors and farm machinery.

"I see no reason to object to the Appropriations Committee's looking into the program," Schmit said. "I would like to see Harold's statement before I comment further, but I am not overly worried about anyone killing the program. We need all the research on alternative fuels we can get."

Gary Shults, vice chairman of the Agricultural Products Industrial Utilization Committee, which operates the gasohol program, said he knew of no government report on gasohol.

"I think someone may have given the senator an outdated report based on wet alcohol. We use anhydrous alcohol which is dry and an entirely different product," he said.

Effect Of Excise Tax Drop Unknown For Individual Bill

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

The drop in the federal excise tax on telephone bills beginning Jan. 1 will result in a $475,000 total savings to Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. customers.

However, what actual savings will be realized by the individual customer is difficult to determine, according to Bill Wylie, advertising assistant in the General Commercial Dept.

Wylie said many factors are involved in figuring the savings such as toll calls, extension and colored phones and other available services offered by LT&T.

He said almost all customers will profit from the reduction in the tax from 7 to 6%, but the savings could be less if customers cut down on toll calls, number of extensions, colored phones — all of which bring in revenue to the telephone company.

Determining what is an average customer of LT&T is difficult, Wylie said, noting that there are various types of accounts and considerable variation in services.

Wylie said that the telephone tax, which has been tacked on telephone bills off and on since World War I, is the last of the excise taxes to be removed by Congress.

The tax on telephone bills was first imposed by Congress as a "temporary measure" during World War I and was repealed briefly after the war.

However, it was reinstituted during the depression and has continued at rates as high as 15% on local service and 25% on long distance calls.

In 1971, Congress moved to eliminate the tax, which had stood at 10% for nearly 20 years. The rate will drop 1% each year until it is eliminated Jan. 1, 1982.

Burglar Takes Yule Gifts

About $200 worth of Christmas presents were among items stolen in a burglary at the Ila G. Boettcher apartment at 2701 N. 79th, according to police reports.

Other articles stolen included a television, an electric typewriter and turquoise jewelry. Value of the stolen articles totaled about $1,400.

Police said the burglary or burglars apparently slipped a credit card between the door jamb and the door to push back the bolt of the lock.

The burglary is the first this Christmas season in which the thief apparently is attracted by the sight of wrapped presents in a home, according to Inspector Roger LaPage.

Report: Don't Force Law Mergers

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Staff members of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee Thursday recommended it temporarily abandon possible mandatory consolidation of county law enforcement agencies.

A legislative resolution (LR79) directed the committee to study the advantages and drawbacks of merging county law enforcement agencies into single units.

The staff report, released Thursday, said: "When one reviews the testimony of the sheriffs and other county and municipal officials (during subcommittee hearings), it becomes readily apparent that their one primary concern for attending the hearing was to protest the loss or possible loss of local power or control.

"With such an unreceptive attitude, a system of mandatory consolidation would have very little chance of success if implemented," the report said. "It is obvious that the county sheriff's and county boards must work together with the municipalities to make consolidation work. It will not work if the towns and villages resent the loss of control in the area of law enforcement."

Staff did recommend that the costs of law enforcement consolidation be examined, since they said this also seems to be an obstacle. County boards and second class cities still should be encouraged to contract for such consolidation, they said.

Fourteen counties have consolidated law enforcement agencies, mainly using the county sheriff's office as the vehicle through contracting with cities and villages for protection. Seward, Lincoln, Platte and Buffalo Counties are the largest which have consolidated.

Another seven, including Thayer, Custer and Cherry, are planning consolidation.

The staff concluded that in those counties which have consolidated, the system "seems to be effective and well-received."

"There were no satisfactory reasons presented to the subcommittee for concluding that county-wide consolidation is an unworkable system which should be abandoned by the state," the staff said.

The purpose of consolidation is to save money while improving the quality of law enforcement. Doubts were raised at subcommittee hearings about how much has been actually saved.

"While in some counties it became clear that there was a net gain (through consolidation), most counties which had attempted consolidation to some extent experienced, initially at least, equal if not increased costs," the staff report said.

"Actual cost estimates are now being sought from the Crime Commission."

Even when initial costs did increase, the staff said, costs to municipalities stabilized. Where costs did not decrease, the staff cited "intangible benefits" derived from the merger, namely, more professsional officers and a decrease in crime in rural areas not patrolled previously by the sheriff's office.

In the smaller towns with constables or marshals, the benefit was more apparent, the staff said.

The staff also recommended that the Legislature remove a legal restriction on the amount a sheriff can charge a municipality for protection. The law presently limits this to 75 cents per person each month.

Legislature May Eliminate PSC's Telephone Division

By The Associated Press

The legislature's Appropriations Committee Thursday made a tentative decision to eliminate the telephone division of the Public Service Commission.

The committee slashed $106,080 from the Public Service Commission's budget request.

The committee accepted the recommendation of staff member Steve Morris, who said the commission has no uniform method of setting telephone rates or standards of service quality.

Lincoln Sen. Harold Simpson said the commission would be asked to come in and tell why they needed the telephone division and how they intended to use the staff.

"I can't help but say they do need them," Simpson said. "If we're not going to have any expert witnesses on our side we're not regulating."

Simpson said the decision to eliminate the division was essentially the same as the commissioners had done when they fired chief engineer Gerald Sasek and not rehired a new engineer.

Stange has been a partner in the firm since 1962. He is a past president of the Nebraska Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

Elected to the board of directors were Von Innes, Lynn Jones, Robert Degenhardt and Claus Johnson.

Free Rides Possible To Lincoln Festival

The Lincoln Transportation System Board agreed tentatively Thursday to provide free bus rides to people attending a proposed Parks and Recreation Department festival this spring.

Norene Gion from the city's recreation staff said a festival called "Lincoln Has" will be in Pioneers Park May 22 and 23. She asked LTS to provide shuttle bus service between parking lots and various events.

Ms. Gion estimated that 100,000 people would attend various events during the festival. Programs planned include artist exhibits, golf tournaments, square dancing, folk-rock concerts, bicycle races and foot races.

Members of the LTS Board said they would be willing to provide bus service, but said they needed more information on the number of buses needed.

$670,000 Suit Filed Against Norfolk Doctor

Madison (UPI) — Malpractice suits asking a total of $670,000 in damages from Dr. James Schwedhelm of Norfolk have been filed in Madison County District Court by Eugene Kreikmeier of Norfolk.

Kreikmeier alleged his son, Timothy, then six months old, was taken to Schwedhelm Dec. 19, 1973, with a high fever. The doctor allegedly treated the boy for tonsilitis.

Later, the Kreikmeiers took their son to the doctor several more times and had several telephone conversations with him but Schwedhelm did not examine him again, according to the suit.

On Dec. 29,, an associate of Schwedhelm diagnosed the boy had meningitis and immediately hospitalized him.

The district court petition said Timothy suffered brain damage that caused physical impairments, including blindness, as well as mental impairments.

Kreikmeier claims Schwedhelm failed to use standard diagnostic procedure to determine whether the child had meningitis.

He said he has incurred $16,000 in medical expenses the past two years and expects to incur an additional $175,000 before the boy reaches the age of majority.

The first suit seeks $200,000 in special and general damages, and the second suit $470,000 for special care and treatment for Timothy after he reaches the age of majority and for general damages.

The second suit said Timothy has a life expectancy of 47 years after he reaches the age of majority.

Early Child Education Conference Is March 5, 6

The Lincoln Association of the Education of Young Children will sponsor a conference on early childhood education March 5-6 at the Radisson-Cornhusker Hotel in Lincoln.

Celebrating the "Year of the Young Child," the 50-year-old association will address the needs, rights and well being of pre-school children.

The conference, with the theme "Open the Window on My World," will attempt to arouse awareness of societal responsibility for children's human rights and their optimal development, according to Mary Jane Lutman, association publicity chairman.

Guest speaker at the conference will be Ella Jenkins, children's music author and composer and a member of the Song Writers Hall of Fame. Ms. Jenkins, listed in Who's Who of American Women in 1972 and 1973, wrote "This is Rhythm" and "Song Book for Children." She is the author, arranger and singer of the film series, "The Me Too Show."

Ms. Jenkins will present the 6:30 p.m. banquet address on Friday, March 5. The session opens at 1 p.m., with afternoon sectional discussions scheduled. More group talks will follow on Saturday morning, March 6.

Persons interested in attending the early childhood education conference may contact Joyce Wagner at the Southeast Community College Child Care Center, 3101 C.

John Gourlay May Be NU Legal Adviser

John C. Gourlay, partner in the firm of Mattson, Ricketts, Davies, Stewart & Calkins of Lincoln, will be recommended for appointment by the Board of Regents to the newly created position of general counsel for the University of Nebraska.

President D.B. Varner said Gourlay would be a point of reference for all legal matters within the University and would call on the current University legal counsel — the firm of Cline, Williams, Wright, Johnson & Oldfather — for advice and assistance in major litigation.

The decision to seek a full-time attorney for the board resulted from a substantial increase in the amount of legal work.

Gourlay received his B.A. degree from the University of Nebraska where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and his J.D. degree from Georgetown University.

The annual state employes' Christmas party will be at 8 p.m. Saturday at Hotel Radisson-Cornhusker.

San Francisco — "In listing Christmas gifts, small rewards to those who have served you over the year are appreciated." So says a bird writing in a women's magazine. She's got a list:

"The man who collects the garbage. The boy who faithfully delivered your paper. The hard-working mailman and the cheerful chap who picks up the laundry . . ."

Except for the garbage man, she's given these splendid people some splendid virtues: "Faithful, hard-working, cheerful." A good deal like me when I was a Boy Scout: "Thrifty, brave, clean and reverent."

Now either this cheerful giver is working a tax loophole, or she's got a tame Man Around The House. Out of his pockets flow these generous gifts.

☆ ☆ ☆

The real advantage of A Man Around The House is that he's seldom around. All women admit this in those cozy morning sessions on the phone.

Lunch the other day with a man who quit an office job and now works out of his home.

He said: "You know while I was doing the commute gig, she was all over me to come home. It was, 'What time will you be home?' And, 'Now you're not going to stop and have a drink with the boys, are you?'

"Now about 9 in the morning she begins taking my coffee cup away. Like a waiter who's trying to dust you off the table. 'Are you going into town today?' she says. 'Oh nothing, nothing,' she says. 'I just thought you might have something to do.' "

(What do women want? So said the great Freud reaching for his hat.)

How merry is our Christmas! As usual the string of colored lights has a burned out globe. When one goes, they all go. The American made lights don't do that. You can pluck out the dead bulb and replace it.

This is a foreign string. Not as practical but plenty of juice with the people who drop in for a hot rum.

"Oh, we picked them up the last time we were in Italy."

Or, "We brought them in Firenze. You know, Florence."

(It will be a long day before the visiting chick gets over that one!)

☆ ☆ ☆

Last year when the tree came down, every light was glowing. I pulled the plug carefully. I put those bulbs carefully to bed. Snuggled in cotton. I put the box on the shelf gently, gently.

So why in the world don't they light when I plug in this year?

I wonder how that women's magazine writer dreamed up all that good will?

My thought is she was making it up. Why did the editor buy it? That's the secret I'd like to know. I'd be afraid to offer a story like that to a magazine. Afraid they'd think I was off my rocker.

I've never seen a Judy so generous. I've seen whole tables full of women stiff the waiter. "Certainly, a dollar is more than enough. All he did was bring the chicken salad and a little coffee."

☆ ☆ ☆

Well, up, up, Rudolph the Rednosed! Life of last night's party. 'Tis the season to be jolly. And to all a goodnight.

Special Lab Attacks Writing Deficiencies

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A 17-year-old Omaha high school student was arrested recently in connection with an armed robbery. When he was taken to the police station, authorities were shocked to find out he couldn't read and could write little more than his name.

This isn't rare, according to S. Alan Cohen of the Random House educational services division.

What is unusual is that Lincoln Northeast High School has recognized its problem and is taking steps to correct it.

Marie Kelley heads the English Department at Northeast and is working full-time to set up a writing laboratory for average or above average students, many of whom have difficulty with spelling, punctuation, style — any of 300 different writing skills.

One-Third Could Qualify

Based on two sample classes Mrs. Kelley taught at Northeast, she said one-third of the sophomores could qualify for a program to improve writing skills.

Educators, parents, lawmakers, reporters all ask the same question: Why?

"Somewhere along the line, these kids weren't taught to write," Cohen said, matter of factly. "At least I can't find anything in their genes or bloodstream to explain it."

So, who's to blame?

'Curriculums Are A Mess'

"We cover hundreds of schools," Cohen said. "American high schools in general are in disarray. The curriculums are in a mess."

Mrs. Kelley said educators find themselves in a squeeze . . . "On one hand is a press for accountability. And on the other is pressure to free up curriculum."

Northeast students are required to take only two courses during their four years in high school — 10th grade English and American history, she pointed out. Choice of other courses is at students' discretion.

"They don't ever have to touch a writing course or literature or journalism course if they don't want to," Mrs. Kelley said.

Won't Take Easy Out

But the consultants from Random House refused to let educators off the hook so quickly.

"Nothing about television keeps us from teaching kids to set off appositives in commas," said Cohen. "Teachers still have to teach their students to read, write and do arithmetic in this world, television or no television."

Coehn has become known nationally for his "high intensity reading program," which uses essentially the same format Mrs. Kelley is developing for Northeast's "Writers' Gallery."

Cohen's approach depends on a carefully controlled curriculum "so teachers and students know precisely what they're doing and how to do it."

Define Your Problem

He focuses on "doing away with fuzzy terms" educators hide behind. "And problem we have in education almost invariably boils down to: What is it you want? What are you getting? What's the discrepancy."

Though writing styles nowadays tend to be freer, less structured, "a person should be aware of the rule before he breaks it," Coehn said. "If you know what you're varying from, it's far more effective."

The problem, it seems, runs deep.

Cohen said he thinks writing is "very, very tough for most people . . . It's a permanent reference of one's ignorance, whereas the spoken word is here and gone."

Negative Associations

Dr. Hyman noted writing is often linked with negative reinforcement. Beginning in first grade, students are handed back essays and English papers with misspelled words circled in red and teachers' comments scribbled in the margins.

Cohen said his systems are "rigged" to be sure kids succeed; positive feedback is the most potent motivator.

Students' writing weak points will be determined at the beginning of the semester, either through tests or instructor observations. For the pilot semester, beginning in January, the program is limited to 45 sophomores, juniors and seniors at Northeast and selected students at Pius X.

Supervision Unneccessary

Mrs. Kelley has been busy editing learning packages for each writing objective — for examples, subordinated clauses, modifiers, particples and gerunds. Packages are organized so students can use them without continuous supervision.

At the end of the semester, writing skills will be compared with writing by students not in the program.

"There are oases across the country," Dr. Human said, inferring Lincoln has one of them.

Don't Worry, He'd Know!

DEAR ABBY: I'm getting married soon, and my fiance and I discussed our pasts thoroughly. I asked him if he had any kids anywhere, and he said he didn't think so. He admitted that he did go to bed with one girl before he met me. He said he might have gotten her pregnant, but he didn't think he did because he never saw her after that. He said he didn't care and didn't want to know. But I want to know.

I found out her name and address and want to call her up and ask her, but my fiance says he doesn't want me to. I would like your advice.

WANST TO KNOW

DEAR WANTS: If your fiance had gotten the girl pregnant she would have contacted him, if for no other reasons, to help with the expenses. The word from here is to forget it.

DEAR ABBY: Dick and I have been married for two years. I'm a little older than he is, and maybe that's why I feel so insecure.

Two weeks ago, I found a letter hidden in his underwear drawer. It was addressed to his office and was from an old girl friend. She wrote that she is being divorced and wants to pick up where she and Dick left off!

I wrote to her and told her that we were happily married and to leave my husband alone. Then I tore up her letter.

She either called Dick at work or wrote him there to tell him about my letter because he came home and raised cane with me for writing to her and destroying her letter. I explained that I only did it because I loved him and was trying to save my marriage. That's the God's honest truth, Abby.

Last night while he was sleeping, I went through his billfold and found her phone number, so I'm sure he's been calling her.

Should I write to her again or call her or what? This is my third marriage and I want it to last. Dick was a perfect husband until this woman came into his life again. Please help me. My whole world is falling apart.

NOWHERE TO TURN

DEAR NOWHERE: Stay out of your husband's billfold and drawers! And don't call or write the other woman. I will only infuriate him and drive them closer together. If Dick has an interest in her, there is nothing you can do. The only hope for a marriage that's falling apart is counseling. If he won't go, go alone.

DEAR ABBY: My wife has a habit of down-grading sincere compliments.

If I say, "Gee, Hon, you look nice in that dress," her reply is likely to be, "Do you really think so? It's just a rag my sister gave me."

Or if I tell her she did a great job cleaning up the house, her response might be, "Well, I guess you haven't seen the kids' room."

I find it hard to understand why she can't accept a compliment without putting herself down. And it hurts me a little. How do you explain it, Abby?

PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: Your wife lacks self-confidence and feels somewhat embarrassed to accept praise. Don't be hurt. Most people have difficulty accepting compliments with grace.

DEAR ABBY: At the time of our marriage (three years ago) I took my husband's name to be my legal name.

I am an artist and feel that my husband has done nothing to merit having his name on my work. It is awkward for me to have to sign my first, maiden and married name on my paintings now when I formerly used only my first and maiden name. How do I get my name legally changed back to my maiden name? My husband knows I love him, and he doesn't object.

I don't know what lawyers charge, but I'm betting it's an arm and a leg. Is there some do-it yourself book I can get?

FATHER'S DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Do-it-yourself legal work can be the most expensive money-saving gimmick around. Find a lawyer and pay him an honest fee.

DEAR ABBY: I'm going with a terrific guy. He has everything a girl could want in a man. Looks, personality, character and money.

So, what's my problem you ask?

He's a wet kisser!

I hate to mention this to him because I don't want to hurt his feelings, but if it weren't for those wet kisses, he would be perfect.

Please help.

GEMINI

DEAR GEMINI: So what's wrong with telling him to dry up?

2. You bid One Club and partner responds One Heart. What would you bid now?

3. Your right-hand opponent bids One Diamond, which you double. Your partner responds One Spade. What would you bid now?

4. Your right-hand opponent bids One Heart, which you double. Your partner responds Two Diamonds. When you bid Two Notrump, partner responds Three Diamonds. What would you bid now?

* * *

1. Four spades. Partner has at least 6 points and you therefore assume a combined holding of at least 26 points, the magic number for game. It would be wrong to bid only three spades, which is strong and invitational but not forcing. You might get left at the post.

Four spades is not a closing bid. It announces 20 points or more, in either high cards or distribution, and invites partner to go on with a better than average hand.

2. Two spades. As this is a jump-shift, partner is obligated to bid again. The jump-shift announces at least 20 points. Any minimum response partner now makes does not show added values, since his rebid is forced.

3. Three spades. Partner may have only 2 or 3 points, possibly less, and it would therefore be wrong to bid four spades opposite a forced response. The jump-raise to three mirrors the values you actually have, but whether game can be made depends on what partner has.

If his hand is

he will pass and have trouble making even three spades.

he will bid four spades and probably make it.

4. Pass. You can't fight City Hall. Partner must have some dreadful hand such as

and you could suffer a disaster by bidding three notrump, which might get doubled. You've told partner twice you have a good hand. Three times would be once too many. It is best to respect partner's three diamond bid. Bridge is a partnership game.

Don't Worry, He'd Know!

DEAR ABBY: I'm getting married soon, and my fiance and I discussed our pasts thoroughly. I asked him if he had any kids anywhere, and he said he didn't think so. He admitted that he did go to bed with one girl before he met me. He said he might have gotten her pregnant, but he didn't think he did because he never saw her after that. He said he didn't care and didn't want to know. But I want to know.

I found out her name and address and want to call her up and ask her, but my fiance says he doesn't want me to. I would like your advice.

WANST TO KNOW

DEAR WANTS: If your fiance had gotten the girl pregnant she would have contacted him, if for no other reasons, to help with the expenses. The word from here is to forget it.

DEAR ABBY: Dick and I have been married for two years. I'm a little older than he is, and maybe that's why I feel so insecure.

Two weeks ago, I found a letter hidden in his underwear drawer. It was addressed to his office and was from an old girl friend. She wrote that she is being divorced and wants to pick up where she and Dick left off!

I wrote to her and told her that we were happily married and to leave my husband alone. Then I tore up her letter.

She either called Dick at work or wrote him there to tell him about my letter because he came home and raised cane with me for writing to her and destroying her letter. I explained that I only did it because I loved him and was trying to save my marriage. That's the God's honest truth, Abby.

Last night while he was sleeping, I went through his billfold and found her phone number, so I'm sure he's been calling her.

Should I write to her again or call her or what? This is my third marriage and I want it to last. Dick was a perfect husband until this woman came into his life again. Please help me. My whole world is falling apart.

NOWHERE TO TURN

DEAR NOWHERE: Stay out of your husband's billfold and drawers! And don't call or write the other woman. I will only infuriate him and drive them closer together. If Dick has an interest in her, there is nothing you can do. The only hope for a marriage that's falling apart is counseling. If he won't go, go alone.

DEAR ABBY: My wife has a habit of down-grading sincere compliments.

If I say, "Gee, Hon, you look nice in that dress," her reply is likely to be, "Do you really think so? It's just a rag my sister gave me."

Or if I tell her she did a great job cleaning up the house, her response might be, "Well, I guess you haven't seen the kids' room."

I find it hard to understand why she can't accept a compliment without putting herself down. And it hurts me a little. How do you explain it, Abby?

PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: Your wife lacks self-confidence and feels somewhat embarrassed to accept praise. Don't be hurt. Most people have difficulty accepting compliments with grace.

DEAR ABBY: At the time of our marriage (three years ago) I took my husband's name to be my legal name.

I am an artist and feel that my husband has done nothing to merit having his name on my work. It is awkward for me to have to sign my first, maiden and married name on my paintings now when I formerly used only my first and maiden name. How do I get my name legally changed back to my maiden name? My husband knows I love him, and he doesn't object.

I don't know what lawyers charge, but I'm betting it's an arm and a leg. Is there some do-it yourself book I can get?

FATHER'S DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Do-it-yourself legal work can be the most expensive money-saving gimmick around. Find a lawyer and pay him an honest fee.

DEAR ABBY: I'm going with a terrific guy. He has everything a girl could want in a man. Looks, personality, character and money.

So, what's my problem you ask?

He's a wet kisser!

I hate to mention this to him because I don't want to hurt his feelings, but if it weren't for those wet kisses, he would be perfect.

Please help.

GEMINI

DEAR GEMINI: So what's wrong with telling him to dry up?

Mood Rings Latest Craze

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

They're the greatest thing to be marketed since the digital watch, the one that tells you with one, two, three pushes of a button the time, day, date and just about anything else you want to know.

And they're selling better than hula hoops, skateboards, yes, even hotcakes.

"They" are mood rings or whatever name you prefer for those rings with stones of continuously changing colors.

Hitting the stores just in time for the holiday shopping sprees, their popularity has managed to keep clerks and stock boys on the run and reorder managers pulling out their hair.

Witness the crowds around the costume jewelry counters at department and discount stores around town. The crowds are larger than ever — and they're hanging around longer.

Try Them On

Shoppers linger, then linger some more. Many insist on trying on the rings before they shell out their money. They want to see what the stone says their mood is. Just in case they didn't already know!

Officially, they're called Mood, Impulse, Awareness or Emotion Rings. Their stones supposedly change color as your general disposition changes from happiness to sadness or remains just sort of mediocre.

Shopper Surprised

One harried mother tried on one. She expected it to be black — permanently. That's bad. Black is the worst color, indicating the wearer should be careful, on guard, that he or she is anxious and undergoing heavy stress.

Instead, the ring's stone turned from a bland gray to blue, the "ultimate," meaning the wearer is at his best, at peace with himself and much, much more — all good.

The shopper was able to explain away the surprising turn of events — and colors. "That's because I don't have my kids with me today," she said.

Still, she was hooked, and bought a ring.

Depending on the setting and the store, the mood rings can be had for as little as $1.96, as much as $10. Some stores carried $20 models but soon settled for the less expensive ones.

"They sell so fast you wouldn't believe it," said Laura Faircloth, discount store clerk. "We get them in one day" about 24 dozen at a time "and they're gone the next."

One store alone reports that more than 1,000 of the rings have been grabbed up by shoppers.

Don't Believe It

Most shoppers claim they don't believe in the stone's accuracy, but they buy the rings anyway, one clerk reported.

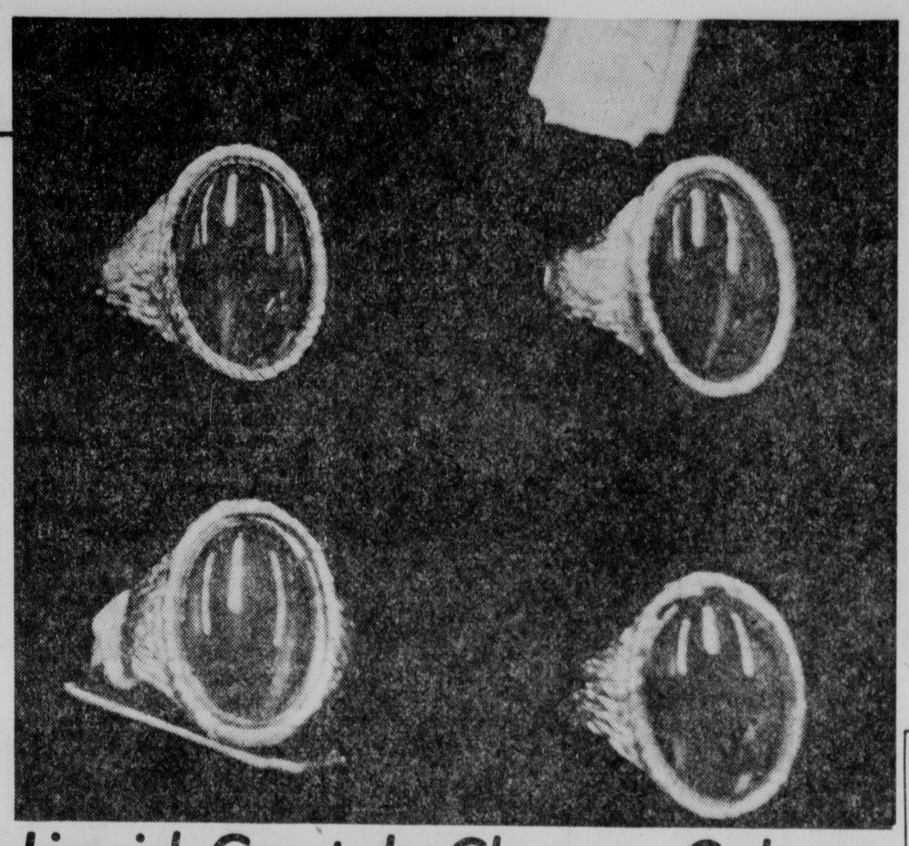
No more will you need to greet friends and acquaintances with the time-worn "Hi! How are you?" With the mood ring, all you need is to take a quick peek at the person's pinky ring. No need to ask . . . and no room for fudging.

Ring Won't Lie

Still another question that can be eliminated from the usual repertoire is the customary interchange between spouses following a busy work day. No need to ask how the day went. The ring won't lie.

It's just because of the tattletale-ish nature of the rings that one man in town refuses to wear a mood ring.

"I don't want anyone to know what's happening," said the anonymous fellow.



Liquid Crystals Change Color

Cold, clammy hands?

Forget it! Your mood ring probably will have a jet black fixation.

The mood stone is made up of liquid crystals — called smectic or nematic crystals, depending on their molecular structure, according to Roger D. Kirby, associate professor of physics at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The crystals have "very unusual optical appearances" that "change very rapidly with different temperatures," he said.

As your mood changes, so does your body temperature; likewise, your mood stone.

Liquid crystals also are used in electronics displays and make up lighted dials of clocks and faces of some watches Kirby said.

In addition, their properties are the subject of study of some physicists — and physicians, he said.

In the medical field, they have been painted on human bodies to find slight hot spots to aid in locating tumors, Kirby said.

Because of their extreme sensitivity to changing temperatures, the liquid crystals and, hence, the mood stones, work best at temperatures of 50-75 degrees.

Extreme temperatures — below freezing and above 120 degrees — and exposure to ultraviolet rays from the sun are to be avoided. They cause the ring's synthetic stone to cease being a tattletale — and to become morose much sooner.

City's Teens Not Drinking More

. . . 64% Say They Drink

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

There is no clear evidence that alcohol consumption and alcoholism among young people is on the rise in Lincoln, the Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs (LCAD) board was told Thursday.

But it isn't declining, either, it learned.

That was the conclusion of Connie Clark, LCAD community awareness coordinator, after a month-long study of youthful drinking.

Included in the study were interviews with agency executives and individuals who work with youth, a review of national information and a survey of five classes in a Lincoln high school.

Through the local survey, Mrs. Clark found that 64.34% of the respondents drink, at least occasionally, compared with the 74% national figure issued in 1973 by the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse.

Of the Lincoln teenagers who said they drink, 23.42% reported they get drunk monthly; 7.21% acknowledged getting drunk weekly.

"Alcohol consumption (among teenagers) clearly parallels adult use," Mrs. Clark concluded. National figures show 68% of the adult population drinks.

In addition, parents may serve as role models, she said, since 86.48% of the students who said they drink have "one or both drinking parents."

Results of interviews with school administrators, police, and sheriff officers and executives of agencies dealing with troubled youths, provided no clear indication of an increase in teenage drinking, she said.

Board member Wally Barnett suggested that teachers, ministers and others who deal with the youths daily may have presented a clearer picture than those who have contact with teenagers after problems have been identified.

Mrs. Clark said that although teen drinking does not appear to be on the rise, existing "evidence of extensive drinking" justifies future surveys to monitor changing trends.

She also called for stepped-up prevention programs in the schools.

Drug and alcohol prevention programs in the schools have a poor national track record, said Dean Austin, board member and Lincoln Public Schools' consultant for health and physical education.

Prevention efforts "may be contributing to the problem" by giving youngsters "some knowledge" and thus raising their curiosity, he said. "Alcohol and drugs is not the problem but the symptom of the problem."

Claiming that prevention comes under many guises, Dr. Ed Lyman asked the board to come to grips with a common definition of the term in order to better deal with its goals.

The board agreed, and decided that treatment, intervention and rehabilitation should be defined, as well.

Under the new LCAD structure, those four terms are prominent in delineating committee assignments.

The teenage alcohol study was tabled for further board consideration. It is to be used in helping LCAD committees establish future priorities.

In other action, the board nominated LCAD president Don Nielsen for election to the board of the National Institute on Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse, and accepted the resignation of board member Dr. John Walker.

10 Said Missing In Caribbean As Sloop Hits Reef

Kingstown, St. Vincent (AP) — An inter-island sloop hit a reef near the island of Bequia 20 miles south of St. Vincent Island in the eastern Caribbean and at least 10 persons were missing, officials said.

Premier Milton Cato of St. Vincent, a self-governing British possession in the Windward Islands, said 70 to 75 persons were on board the Lady Angela at the time of the accident and 60 were taken safely to Bequia.

Police were searching for the others.

FTC: Listerine Must Stop Ads Or Spend Millions To Admit Lie

Washington (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission Thursday ordered the makers of Listerine either to stop advertising entirely or to spend $10 million on ads admitting they have been lying since 1921 about how the mouthwash will prevent or cure colds and sore throats.

It was the first time the commission has ordered a company to run a corrective advertisement. Previous cases have all involved negotiated settlements where the firms involved agreed to make the "confessions."

"After carefully reviewing the testimony of the experts called by both sides and the studies admitted into evidence . . . we must conclude that the preponderance of the evidence demonstrates that, contrary to advertising claims, the use of Listerine, as directed, will not prevent or cure colds or sore throats or ameliorate cold symptoms," said FTC Chairman Lewis A. Engman in an opinion approved unanimously by the commission.

The FTC ordered this language to appear in future ads:

"Contrary to prior advertising, Listerine will not prevent colds or sore throats or lessen their severity."

The manufacturer, Warner-Lambert Co., Morris Plains, N.J., called the order "unfounded" and said it would appeal it to the federal courts, including the Supreme Court, if need be.

"Listerine advertising is based on the latest scientific evidence relating to colds and does not suggest that Listerine prevents colds," a company spokesman said.

The initial decision by the administrative law judge who heard the case would have simply required corrective ads for a two-year period. But Engman said that may not work if Warner-Lambert chooses simply not to do much advertising for the next two years.

As a result, he said, the agency is ordering the company to stop advertising entirely or to spend the equivalent of one year's Listerine advertising budget for the period 1962 to 1972 on ads which will carry the correction, and to run those ads for however long it will take to spend that amount of money.

City's Teens Not Drinking More

. . . 64% Say They Drink

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

There is no clear evidence that alcohol consumption and alcoholism among young people is on the rise in Lincoln, the Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs (LCAD) board was told Thursday.

But it isn't declining, either, it learned.

That was the conclusion of Connie Clark, LCAD community awareness coordinator, after a month-long study of youthful drinking.

Included in the study were interviews with agency executives and individuals who work with youth, a review of national information and a survey of five classes in a Lincoln high school.

Through the local survey, Mrs. Clark found that 64.34% of the respondents drink, at least occasionally, compared with the 74% national figure issued in 1973 by the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse.

Of the Lincoln teenagers who said they drink, 23.42% reported they get drunk monthly; 7.21% acknowledged getting drunk weekly.

"Alcohol consumption (among teenagers) clearly parallels adult use," Mrs. Clark concluded. National figures show 68% of the adult population drinks.

In addition, parents may serve as role models, she said, since 86.48% of the students who said they drink have "one or both drinking parents."

Results of interviews with school administrators, police, and sheriff officers and executives of agencies dealing with troubled youths, provided no clear indication of an increase in teenage drinking, she said.

Board member Wally Barnett suggested that teachers, ministers and others who deal with the youths daily may have presented a clearer picture than those who have contact with teenagers after problems have been identified.

Mrs. Clark said that although teen drinking does not appear to be on the rise, existing "evidence of extensive drinking" justifies future surveys to monitor changing trends.

She also called for stepped-up prevention programs in the schools.

Drug and alcohol prevention programs in the schools have a poor national track record, said Dean Austin, board member and Lincoln Public Schools' consultant for health and physical education.

Prevention efforts "may be contributing to the problem" by giving youngsters "some knowledge" and thus raising their curiosity, he said. "Alcohol and drugs is not the problem but the symptom of the problem."

Claiming that prevention comes under many guises, Dr. Ed Lyman asked the board to come to grips with a common definition of the term in order to better deal with its goals.

The board agreed, and decided that treatment, intervention and rehabilitation should be defined, as well.

Under the new LCAD structure, those four terms are prominent in delineating committee assignments.

The teenage alcohol study was tabled for further board consideration. It is to be used in helping LCAD committees establish future priorities.

In other action, the board nominated LCAD president Don Nielsen for election to the board of the National Institute on Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse, and accepted the resignation of board member Dr. John Walker.

10 Said Missing In Caribbean As Sloop Hits Reef

Kingstown, St. Vincent (AP) — An inter-island sloop hit a reef near the island of Bequia 20 miles south of St. Vincent Island in the eastern Caribbean and at least 10 persons were missing, officials said.

Premier Milton Cato of St. Vincent, a self-governing British possession in the Windward Islands, said 70 to 75 persons were on board the Lady Angela at the time of the accident and 60 were taken safely to Bequia.

Police were searching for the others.

FTC: Listerine Must Stop Ads Or Spend Millions To Admit Lie

Washington (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission Thursday ordered the makers of Listerine either to stop advertising entirely or to spend $10 million on ads admitting they have been lying since 1921 about how the mouthwash will prevent or cure colds and sore throats.

It was the first time the commission has ordered a company to run a corrective advertisement. Previous cases have all involved negotiated settlements where the firms involved agreed to make the "confessions."

"After carefully reviewing the testimony of the experts called by both sides and the studies admitted into evidence ... we must conclude that the preponderance of the evidence demonstrates that, contrary to advertising claims, the use of Listerine, as directed, will not prevent or cure colds or sore throats or ameliorate cold symptoms," said FTC Chairman Lewis A. Engman in an opinion approved unanimously by the commission.

The FTC ordered this language to appear in future ads:

"Contrary to prior advertising, Listerine will not prevent colds or sore throats or lessen their severity."

The manufacturer, Warner-Lambert Co., Morris Plains, N.J., called the order "unfounded" and said it would appeal it to the federal courts, including the Supreme Court, if need be.

"Listerine advertising is based on the latest scientific evidence relating to colds and does not suggest that Listerine prevents colds," a company spokesman said.

The initial decision by the administrative law judge who heard the case would have simply required corrective ads for a two-year period. But Engman said that may not work if Warner-Lambert chooses simply not to do much advertising for the next two years.

As a result, he said, the agency is ordering the company to stop advertising entirely or to spend the equivalent of one year's Listerine advertising budget for the period 1962 to 1972 on ads which will carry the correction, and to run those ads for however long it will take to spend that amount of money.

E. Wheeler Dies; Was Army Chief

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) — Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, who was chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff for six years, longer than any other man, died Thursday afternoon at Frederick Memorial Hospital.

He was 67 and had retired in 1970.

His wife reported that Wheeler had suffered a slight stroke late Wednesday. He was being driven by ambulance from King's Daughters Hospital in Martinsburg, W.Va., to Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington when his condition worsened and he was taken to Frederick Memorial.

Wheeler was Army chief of staff from Oct. 1, 1962 through July 3, 1964 and then took over as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the nation's highest military post.

Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld issued a statement saying:

"News of the death of Gen. Wheeler has been received with deep regret in the Department of Defense. He leaves behind fond memories of a dedicated and stalwart professional who served his country long, well and faithfully. The entire Department of Defense joins me in extending condolences to the Wheeler family."

Wheeler is survived by his widow and one son, Gilmore S. Wheeler.

Wheeler held some of the highest U.S. military assignments through much of the Vietnam war under three presidents — John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard M. Nixon.

Wheeler was picked by Kennedy to be Army chief of staff in 1962 after having made a deep impression on Kennedy as a briefing officer during the 1960 presidential election when Kennedy was the successful Democratic candidate.

He was highly regarded for his ability to resolve service differences when he headed the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Born Jan. 13, 1908 in Washington, D.C., Wheeler was graduated from West Point in 1932.

His only combat service came in the last few months of World War II when he was chief of staff with the 63rd Infantry Division during the final campaign in Germany.

Stricken with a heart attack in September 1967, Wheeler remained on active duty for three more years as chairman of the JCS before retiring in 1970. Since then, he had spent most of his time on his farm in West Virginia near Martinsburg, about 75 miles from Washington.

High School Students Fall Short In Race To Collect Canned Food

More correctly, that's SCROOGE, Student Christmas Rush for Oodles and Oodles of Goodies, Etc.

The whole thing is a Campus Life-promoted drive to collect canned goods for distribution to the needy, according to Glen Jones, director of the high school religious organization.

About 75 students from five high schools were given 30 minutes to gather the canned goods and return them to the Evangelical Free Church, 57th and Gladstone, for counting.

"Last year we had about 120 out and they gathered 1,200 cans. That's an unofficial world record for the project," Jones said, explaining that the idea originated in California with some Campus Life groups.

This year the cans are being given to the People's City Mission. "They've had their share of problems this year," Jones said, noting that all charitable organizations have suffered setbacks in their collection efforts.

Alas, the real Scrooge must have knocked on some of the same doors the students did Thursday night as their total was down to only 785 cans for the 30-minute period.

The Northeast High group was the top collector with 193 cans, followed closely by Southeast with 181, East with 165, Lincoln High with 139 and Norris with 107.

Donations ranged from a 5-ounce can of fruit to a 6 pound, 13 ounce can of tropical fruit salad. They were brought in boxes, sacks and one enthusiastic student even used his jacket to carry the goods.

"Some people think maybe we're just a bunch of hippies trying to scrounge food, or maybe that it's some silly prank," Jones said. "But we like to think of it as an awareness of the total person and his physical needs, not merely his spiritual."

Two Liquor Stores Robbed At Gunpoint

For the second time in two weeks, Lincoln had two armed robberies on a Thursday night.

H & L Beverage store at 1434 N. 27th was robbed by a lone gunman shortly after 6 p.m. Then, just before 11 p.m., a lone gunman robbed Bud's Beverages at 1670 West O.

Police said a black male, 19 or 20 years old, wearing a maroon jacket and a light brown stocking cap and carrying a small handgun is being sought for the West O robbery.

The robbery was the first at Bud's, but marked the third in six weeks for H&L.

Robbery number three came early Thursday night as a lone gunman entered the store and took an undetermined amount of money from the cash register as well as personal property belonging to a store employe and a customer, police said.

The man, described as a black male in his early 20's, 5-foot-10 and 160 pounds, was wearing a stocking cap and a dark coat and was last seen heading north on 27th, police said. He reportedly has a space between his two upper front teeth, they added.

The store was first hit by a lone gunman on Monday, Nov. 3. A Lincoln man has been arrested and charged with that robbery.

Two men are still at large following the Wednesday, Nov. 26, robbery of the store, one of a rash of armed robberies in a two-week period.

The other double robbery night was Dec. 4 when two businesses in West Lincoln were held up by a pair of gunmen. Three persons have been arrested in connection with those incidents.

'Close Friend' Of JFK Plans To Reveal More

San Diego (UPI) — The glamorous and mysterious "close friend" of John F. Kennedy plans to reveal more about her relationship with the late President, her attorney said Thursday.

The attorney for Judith Campbell Exner said she met with CBS "60 Minutes" representatives shortly after telling reporters Wednesday of her friendship with Kennedy.

Attorney Bryan Monaghan declined to say if an offer was made to appear on the program but left the door open to potential bids from other interested parties by saying, "We're looking for the proper forum to tell this complicated story."

"We talked to 60 Minutes, but we're not making any deals," he said. "We're looking at all alternatives. We want the story told right.

"It may be a book, or series of articles or television interview, but it certainly is not going to be further news conferences."

The mystery woman emerged from 15 years of obscurity when bits of her life crept into secret Senate Intelligence Committee testimony about CIA assassination plots. In a news conference Wednesday she disclosed that she had a personal relationship with two Mafia figures at the same time she was seeing the President.

Appearing before 60 reporters, she said she never discussed her relationship with Kennedy when seeing Chicago Mafia chief Sam Giancana and his associate John Roselli, who were hired to kill Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

In a prepared statement, she said she knew Giancana, shot down in his Chicago suburb home last June a week before he was to testify before the committee, and Roselli.

She said the relationship was of a "personal nature" but the friendship "in no way related to or affected my relationship with Jack Kennedy, nor did I discuss either of them with the other."

She also said she sought Monaghan's advice after at least one offer was made to buy the rights to her life story, and denied having been unsuccessful in earlier attempts to sell a book, or that she was currently interested in writing one or looking for an agent.

She dodged repeated questions about whether she was Kennedy's mistress, saying the facts had been documented and stored so "the full story will be told" later.

Monaghan said Thursday she put her experiences down on a series of tape recordings. He adamantly denied the news conference was called to promote the sale of her story saying, "It was called because she wasn't a go-between."

"I can at this time emphatically state that my relationship with Jack Kennedy was of a close, personal nature and did not involve conspiratorial shenanigans of any kind," she said Wednesday.

She said she had no knowledge of a CIA plot against Castro and was not a conduit between Kennedy and the two Mafia bosses.

She said she saw Kennedy often during the 54 weeks of their relationship, including 20 times at the White House where she was free to call him and have lunch with him.

Mrs. Exner, the wife of professional golfer Dan Exner since April, declined to give her age, but county records showed it as 35. That would mean she was 20 when Kennedy went to Las Vegas Feb. 7, 1960, to address the Women's Democratic Club of Clark County the following night. She said that was when she met the President.

She said the FBI harassed her during her relationship with Kennedy but gave no details and said she never discussed the harassment nor matters of political or international consequence with him.

She also said Kennedy was unaware of her connections with the gangland figures until he apparently was told by the FBI.

Canadians Limit U.S. Oil Exports

Ottawa (AP) — Canadian crude oil exports to the United States will be limited to a maximum 510,000 barrels a day in January, the National Energy Board says.

This is down sharply from the current maximum allowable level of 750,000 barrels a day but is in line with a recommendation by the board last month that exports be reduced to an average 460,000 barrels a day in 1976.

Football Fans Face 'No Smoking' Order

Pontiac, Mich. (UPI) — Nonsmokers scored a notable triumph Thursday when operators of the Pontiac Stadium, the home of the Detroit Lions, said they would comply fully with court orders banning smoking in the 80,638-seat facility.

A spokesman for the Pontiac Stadium Authority said officials would not contest an order handed down Wednesday by Circuit Court Judge William Beer.

It means no smoking in the stands Sunday when the Lions end their regular NFL season against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Under the court order, smoking remains legal in about 100 plush private suites and administrative offices, including the press box.

Stadium authorities said they would remove cigarette vending machines, post "No Smoking" signs throughout the huge $55.7 million domed arena and make several announcements before and during the game.

"Smoking is like a constant and continuous (assault) to the non-smoker who is obligated to breathe the same air," Beer said in his ruling.

Violators who defy the court order face prosecution under a Pontiac ordinance that carries a maximum $100 fine.

The ruling stemmed from a suit filed several months ago by Lawrence Stockler, a West Bloomfield lawyer and longtime Detroit Lions season ticket holder.

During court hearings, Stockler called several experts to give testimony that smoking during football games may harm the health of non-smokers. One witness said smoke levels inside the stadium are worse than Los Angeles smog at its worst.

She also said she sought Monaghan's advice after at least one offer was made to buy the rights to her life story, and denied having been unsuccessful in earlier attempts to sell a book, or that she was currently interested in writing one or looking for an agent.

She dodged repeated questions about whether she was Kennedy's mistress, saying the facts had been documented and stored so "the full story will be told" later.

Monaghan said Thursday she put her experiences down on a series of tape recordings. He adamantly denied the news conference was called to promote the sale of her story saying, "It was called because she wasn't a go-between."

"I can at this time emphatically state that my relationship with Jack Kennedy was of a close, personal nature and did not involve conspiratorial shenanigans of any kind," she said Wednesday.

She said she had no knowledge of a CIA plot against Castro and was not a conduit between Kennedy and the two Mafia bosses.

She said she saw Kennedy often during the 54 weeks of their relationship, including 20 times at the White House where she was free to call him and have lunch with him.

Mrs. Exner, the wife of professional golfer Dan Exner since April, declined to give her age, but county records showed it as 35. That would mean she was 20 when Kennedy went to Las Vegas Feb. 7, 1960, to address the Women's Democratic Club of Clark County the following night. She said that was when she met the President.

She said the FBI harassed her during her relationship with Kennedy but gave no details and said she never discussed the harassment nor matters of political or international consequence with him.

She also said Kennedy was unaware of her connections with the gangland figures until he apparently was told by the FBI.

Canadians Limit U.S. Oil Exports

Ottawa (AP) — Canadian crude oil exports to the United States will be limited to a maximum 510,000 barrels a day in January, the National Energy Board says.

This is down sharply from the current maximum allowable level of 750,000 barrels a day but is in line with a recommendation by the board last month that exports be reduced to an average 460,000 barrels a day in 1976.

Omaha (AP) — Hugh V. Plunkett Jr. of Austin, Minn., has been elected chairman of the board of directors of Tele-Trip Co., Inc., a wholly-owned Mutual of Omaha affiliate.

Plunkett currently serves as vice chairman of the board of directors of Mutual of Omaha and also is a director of United of Omaha. He is a partner in the law firm of Plunkett, Schmitt & Plunkett.

Evergreen Will Begin Omaha To Chicago Flights

Omaha (AP) — Evergreen International Airlines of Marana, Ariz., will begin round-trip flights between Omaha and Chicago, possibly as early as Friday, the firm's president said Thursday.

"We definitely will begin two-a-day and perhaps three-a-day round-trip flights at 8 a.m. Monday," Ward Eason said.

Eason said permission to make the flights was granted by the Civil Aeronautics Board because of the strike against United Airlines, Omaha's major air carrier.

Eason said Evergreen will fly four-engine, Lockheed Electra II prop-jet planes equipped with 94 seats. The flights will land at Midway Airport in Chicago.

Some Federal Workers To Get Pay Increases

Omaha (AP) — A pay raise of 7.7% to 8.3% for blue-collar federal government employes becomes effective Sunday, officials said.

Carl Holt, national representative of the American Federation of Government Employes, said the increase was announced by the Department of Defense Wage Policy Committee.

Holt said the amount was determined by a survey of comparable jobs in private industry.

He said salaries now range from $4 to $6 an hour. The new scale is effective for blue-collar government workers in the western Nebraska to North Platte region.

Minister Fights To Speak Again

Beatrice — A French horn, even if new and costly, would be a strange find under most Christmas trees. This one has lost luster and its big dents even have little dents.

But every time the Rev. Gene Dappen puts his lips to the mouthpiece, out comes a little sweeter song of hope. Every note is something of a miracle.

Unwrapped early because of two little ones who couldn't keep a secret, the used $10 instrument is much more than another family present. It's a milestone measure of how remarkably far the young minister has come in three Christmases.

It was Nov. 28, 1972, when the Lincoln native, then assistant pastor of Beatrice's Centenary United Methodist Church, was felled by a severe stroke. His right side was paralyzed and for two months he lay totally speechless.

Genuine Miracle

Then came what those close to Gene describe as "nothing less than a miracle," even though it took some time. Five months at Omaha's Immanuel Medical Center, including two at its innovative stroke rehabilitation center, were just the start.

"The doctors said if Gene ever developed even a 25-word vocabulary, we'd be lucky," said his Colorado-born wife, Vera. "But the progress has been remarkable, especially his speech. Last week he even led an Advent communion service entirely on his own."

Intensive home therapy continues to pay off for the frequently smiling victim, now 37. He's a regular in the Centenary choir, serves on several church committees and just passed rigid tests for a handicapped driver's permit.

Demands More

But the young preacher himself is the last to tout such accomplishments. Ever the perfectionist, according to his wife, he continually demands more of himself than he is able to deliver.

"When I read that communion service, I had to go no faster than a little boy, but I did get through every word, said Dappen, whose attitude continues to amaze former parishioners. "I learned to write with my left hand — it's slow but legible — and have started now on music composition."

Since the French horn is a left-hand instrument, it fits beautifully into the proud owner's rehabilitation. Wonder of wonders, that's the instrument he played at Lincoln Northeast High School and for nine years with the 43rd National Guard Army Band.

A 1961 graduate of Nebraska Wesleyan University, Dappen was working toward a music master's degree at UNL when he felt called to the ministry. Ordained in 1968 from Iliff School of Theology in Denver, he had a year's pastorate in that city, then 2½ years at St. James United Methodist in Lincoln.

Stroke Unexpected

The stroke, blamed on an unusual congenital defect of a carotid artery, hit unexpectedly 11 months after his assignment to the Beatrice church. At the time his two children, Ronnie and Karen, were only 3 and 1.

Dappen's father Ted, incidentally, is well known around the state for his many years of educational service with the State Health Department. Now retired, he also served as chair man of the Governor's Physical Fitness Committee.

What can the minister expect in the way of future progress?

An active member of the Southeast Nebraska Stroke Club, young Dappen has ever greater regard for the value of home therapy. His wife, now seriously considering a career in the work, leads him daily in both physical and speech programs.

Uncertain whether he will be able to re-enter the ministry, he is weighing that possibility against a possible career in music. Doctors say it is difficult to predict when his progress will "reach the level of planing out."

"We know of a similarly stricken minister in Iowa who is back in the pulpit after seven years, but they tell us strokes are as individualistic as people," said the wife. "As one Omaha doctor tells us, Gene doesn't fit the percentages. There are no average miracles."

THE DAPPENS ... a miracle in every note.

Creighton Team To Study Intestinal Cancer

Omaha (AP) — A Creighton University medical team will conduct a study to find out why southeast Nebraska counties have some of the nation's highest rates of often-fatal intestinal cancer.

"One of the theories, really speculation, is that an increase in beef and fat content in the diet may correlate with colon cancer. But the issue really is an exceedingly complex one," said Dr. Henry Lynch, chairman of Creighton's Preventive Medicine Dept.

Cancer of the colon, "the most common cancer except for skin cancer in both males and females," is fatal in about 50 to 60% of all cases, partially because it is often diagnosed too late, Lynch said.

A National Cancer Institute study showed an average 27.1 males and 27.4 females of every 100,000 persons in Butler County had colon cancer. The national average ranges from 12.1-16.5 males and 12.62-16.25 females in 100,000.

Lynch, working with Dr. Mark Greene of the National Cancer Institute, will be assisted in the study by five nurses, an attorney specializing in environmental law, cancer specialists and nutritionists.

The Nebraska counties involved are primarily farming areas, but Lynch said some industrial areas in other parts of the nation also have high rates of colon cancer.

According to the Cancer Institute study, New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Washington D.C., Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts also have high rates of colon cancer.

Affluency also appears to be a factor, according to a published report by Lynch. "Socioeconomic factors may determine dietary factors. The more affluent are more likely to be munching on beefsteak," he said.

Although Nebraska's overall colon cancer average of 16.6-17.6 males and 15.6-17.1 females per 100,000 was below the national average, the southeastern counties of Richardson, Johnson, Cass, York, Colfax, Saline, Lancaster, Douglas and Otoe were substantially higher than the national average for males, females or both.

Two other counties, Keith in western Nebraska and Greeley in mid-eastern Nebraska, also were high.

Lynch expects the study to continue for several years. "It's not going to be a simple matter, or we would have stumbled onto it a long time ago," he said.

The team hopes to receive funding from the National Cancer Institute.

Scottsbluff Hospital Addition Opposed

Scottsbluff (AP) — The executive director of the Panhandle Health Planning Council has voiced opposition to a proposed $816,000 addition to West Nebraska General Hospital in Scottsbluff.

The addition would be used as an office building for private physicians.

The council official, Dan Belcher of Scottsbluff, said in a letter to Burke Casari, a State Health Department sociologist, that various points must be given close consideration.

He said the office building could cause family physicians to congregate in Scottsbluff while the communities of Morrill and Chappell would have none.

He added that the absence of tax liability would reduce the total cost of the structure, thus reducing rentals and putting the facility in competition with existing and future builders and operators, and inclusion of a competitive pharmacy would be almost certain.

Scottsbluff (AP) — The executive director of the Panhandle Health Planning Council has voiced opposition to a proposed $816,000 addition to West Nebraska General Hospital in Scottsbluff.

The addition would be used as an office building for private physicians.

The council official, Dan Belcher of Scottsbluff, said in a letter to Burke Casari, a State Health Department sociologist, that various points must be given close consideration.

He said the office building could cause family physicians to congregate in Scottsbluff while the communities of Morrill and Chappell would have none.

He added that the absence of tax liability would reduce the total cost of the structure, thus reducing rentals and putting the facility in competition with existing and future builders and operators, and inclusion of a competitive pharmacy would be almost certain.

Nebraskans Vote To Sustain Tax Cut Veto

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska's three Republican members of the U.S. House, Charles Thone, John Y. McCollister and Virginia Smith, voted to sustain President Ford's veto fo a tax cut extension.

The vote was 265 voting for the override, 157 to sustain the veto. A two-thirds majority is needed to override a veto.

By failing to override, the House virtually assured a tax hike for all Americans beginning Jan. 1, and Nebraskans will face a double increase because the state's personal income tax, which is tied to the amount of federal income taxes paid, has been increased from 12 to 15% of the federal liability. However, State Tax Commissioner William Peters said Thursday's vote will have "very little effect" on the state's income.

Nebraska's delegation did not express opposition to the tax cuts, but wants a bill which will keep federal spending levels down.

"It isn't going to affect your taxes — it'll affect your withholdings (taxes) — but it won't affect your taxes because your Congress is going to take action on this next year sometime," said McCollister in a telephone interview.

"The real question is what are we going to do with spending," McCollister added.

McCollister noted that President Ford "wants even larger tax cuts," but that he wants them to be matched "dollar-for-dollar" with federal spending cuts.

"The issue today is really not taxes, the issue today is that we were able to force the majority to confront this spending issue a lot more directly," McCollister said.

Before the Thursday's vote, House Democrats had said they had enough votes to override, and the vote totals came as somewhat of a surprise.

McCollister attributed the turn-around to "is an increasing awareness" of spending issues on the part of the public.

McCollister said the fiscal battle is not over reducing next year's expenditures below this year's, but to limit the increase to 6%, rather than 16%.

McCollister said he would like to see a reduction in foreign aid, and that the "welfare" question must "be attacked."

However, McCollister said he would rather see the cuts spread "pretty evenly across the board."

Mrs. Smith echoed McCollister.

Mrs. Smith said she thinks the failure to override the veto is a "clear indication of the growing concern on the part of the American people over excessive federal spending."

She said the issue was not whether the tax cuts should have been continued, but whether the Congress was willing make a clear indication that it would hold the line on spending. The nation is now spending about $203 million more than it takes in every day, she added.

"I voted against a bill yesterday because it did not place any limits on spending, and I voted to sustain the President's veto for the same reason," said Mrs. Smith.

Along with welfare and foreign aid, Mrs. Smith said she would like to limit spending increases for government regulation.

"Over-regulation by the federal government is increasing the cost of everything," she said in a telephone interview, adding that increases should be limited in every category.

However, Mrs, Smith said she, along with most other members of the Congress, thinks taxes should be cut.

"I think taxes are too high, and I think we spend too much of our money running the government in Washington," she said.

Mrs. Smith said she is "very much hoping" that the Congress will put a ceiling on federal expenditures, and carry on with the 1975 tax cuts. She noted that a bill has been introduced that would continue the 1975 tax cuts for three months to give the Congress time to develop a new program, "and hopefully come out with a tax reform."

Thone said he voted to sustain the veto because he thought the bill in question was "fiscally irresponsible."

"I think the people are smarter than their (the Democrats) are giving them credit for," said Thone, also in a telephone interview.

Thone said the bill, if it had passed, would "fan the fires of inflation and get old Uncle Sam in a real pickle."

Although he is only "luke warm" towards the tax cuts, Thone added that there is nothing to prevent the Congress from going ahead with an alternate proposal that would include an extension of the tax cuts.

"There's talk in the cloak rooms around here that the President might call us all back after Christmas to act on it," said the 1st District lawmaker.

He also noted that the Congress could act on the tax reduction after it reconvenes next year.

Like McCollister and Mrs. Smith, Thone said he would like to see cutbacks in welfare, but that "foreign aid is Number 1 on my list."

"I think it's (foreign aid) is a terrible waste, counter-productive in many areas," said Thone.

Thone also said he does not go along with all of the requests in the Defense Department's budget asking.

"The worst program of all, I think, is this public service job area," Thone said. "There's still a lot of money being poured into that public sector, and I don't think that that helps us a darn bit to stimulate the economy."

Peters: Effect Of Veto Minimal

By The Associated Press

Congressional failure to override a presidential veto of a tax cut bill probably would have "very little effect" on Nebraska's state income tax, Tax Commissioner William Peters said Thursday.

"Most of those cuts, I believe, were in the form of credits that did not affect our rate when they went into existence," Peters said.

Nebraskans' state income tax is a portion of their federal income tax liability. Next year, the state income tax rate will be 15% of federal liability.

The state applied its percentage tax rate before the federal tax credits could be claimed last year.

"My research people said that since that setup didn't affect us then, its being changed won't affect us now," Peters said. "If it does, the effect would be minimal."

A credit is a sum deducted from the tax you must pay. The state simply taxes what you owe the federal government prior to the credit, Peters said.

"If there were some additional change that significantly altered the amount of money we would collect, then we would simply adjust our withholding rate," Peters said. "But our policy people think the federal government would likely adjust its withholding rate first, so we wouldn't have to do anything at this level."

"There won't be any windfall for the state coffers regardless what happens," Peters said. "We would adjust our withholding if necessary to collect the amount the Board of Equalization set out to collect."

Conservation Aid To Remain Level

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Federal funding of conservation projects under the Agricultural Conservation Program in Nebraska is likely to be approximately the same as it was a year ago, according to Paul Sindt, head of the State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

The initial funding provided for Nebraska has been announced as $2,219,000, based on a nationwide funding of $85 million.

This is $95 million less than appropriated by Congress. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has asked Congress to defer the remaining amount or to not spend it.

Congress has to approve this deferral, which is unlikely according to informed sources in Washington.

"The amount of money that is expected to be available should be similar to what we had last year. Most of the same practices will be in effect," Sindt predicted.

The actual selection of practices to be approved on farms is left to the county committees made up of local farmers. The state sets up a series of guidelines for them to follow however.

"There are about 14 practices that are used in Nebraska to provide long-lasting conservation efforts. We concentrate on dams, terraces, forestry incentives and irrigation re-use-pits because they offer long-term benefits," Sindt explained.

A committee meeting to determine which practices will be approved will be held at the state ASCS office on Jan. 6.

"These county people often have ideas they want to use in conservation efforts in their community which could cause some changes, but generally I think it will be similar to the conservation programs we have had in the past," Sindt said.

Governor Asks For Emergency Ag Loans

By United Press International

Gov. J. James Exon, responding to drought crop damage estimates of $162,365,000 in 27 counties, has asked Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz to provide for emergency loans to farmers in those counties.

If the request is approved, farmers in the counties will be able to get Farmers Home Administration loans at 5% with a maximum of seven years.

Exon's Thursday request was made on the basis of a recommendation from the State Emergency Board, which is chaired by Paul Sindt of Lincoln.

Records in Sindt's office show counties in the central third of the state was hardest hit by the drought, the highest estimated losses came from Gage County, where the county emergency board said they were $19,229,000.

By the end of November, the Emergency Board had paid farmers about $4,531,000 in disaster payments, but not all of it was the result of the drought. Some were for hail and blizzard losses.

The 27 counties and their estimated losses included:

Antelope, $1,123,876; Cass, $10,463,000; Cedar, $16,228,000; Cherry, $8,721,000; Custer, $4,771,000; Dakota, $5,555,000; Dixon, $9,278,000; Dodge, $8,602,000; Frontier, $4,150,000; Gage, $19,229,000; Johnson, $3,529,000; Knox, $14,617,000; Lincoln, $2,570,000; Nance, $2,822,000; Nuckolls, $1,507,000; Otoe, $10,121,000; Pierce, $1,815,000; Thayer, $1,229,000; Thurston, $3,443,000; Valley, $660,000; Wayne, $2,271,000; Webster, $7,474,000; Brown, $5,019,000; Keya Paha, $5,321,000; Rock, $5,880,000; Boyd, $2,346,000; Sherman, $3,938,000.

Funds OKd To Speed Soil Survey

Nebraska's soil survey program will get a financial shot in the arm from the Old West Commission, although the exact amount available to the state is still to be determined.

The money will be used in a two-year program on accelerating soil surveys for the five-state area of North Dakota, Montana, South Dakota and Wyoming. The soil survey program is operated under the federally sponsored Soil Conservation Service.

Under the accelerated guideline, Nebraska would be completely soil mapped within the next 10 years, according to Jim Culver, state SCS soil scientist.

To date 29 counties have published soil maps, 20 are awaiting publication and another 20 are now in the process of being mapped. There are still 24 counties that do not have a soil survey party assigned.

Culver credited Don Nelson of the state Office of Program and Planning, Vincent Dreezen of the Conservation and Survey Division of the University of Nebraska and Dayle Williamson of the Nebraska Natural Resource Commission as key individuals involved in getting Old West funding for the soil mapping.

"It is anticipated the funds, when they become available, will be used for publications, soil investigations and field operations," Culver said.

Deer Damage To Be Measured

By United Press International

The increased use of center pivot irrigation systems in the Sandhills may cause ranchers concern over deer that invite themselves to lunch, the University of Nebraska Agricultural Institute said Thursday.

The institute said no one knows yet just how big a dent deer are making in each "oasis" of alfalfa or corn raised under a center pivot system.

But, starting in January of next year the State Game Commission will join forces with the NU Department of Poultry and Wildlife Sciences to measure the amount of crops eaten by deer to try to develop methods of controlling damage.

The commission will fund the two-year study, which will be headed by Phil Gipson, extension wildlife specialist, and Tom Hagemoser of Lincoln, a graduate student.

Using aerial photos, Hagemoser has counted the number of center pivots in Rock, Brown and Holt Counties, where he plans to do about 90% of his research.

He estimated about 1,500 center pivots in those three counties.

"Law enforcement and game management personnel in that area indicate that this is a problem and they expect it to become more serious as center pivot irrigation increases in the Sandhills region," Hagemoser said.

The deer count in those three counties varies from a density of one to three animals per square mile up on the plains to about four to eight per square mile along the Niobrara River.

In addition to finding out if losses are serious and then how serious, the study will also feature experimental control means.

"The electric fence offers possibilities," Gipson said. "Other methods, including exploding devices and bright flashing lights. Scarecrows of aluminum pie plates or strips of plastic seem to work in some cases."

Judge Upholds Hastings Zoning For Restaurant

Hastings (AP) — Adams County District Court Judge Norris Chadderdon rules Thursday that the Hastings City Council did not act arbitrarily last spring when it rezoned four lots on the city's near north side from R-3 residential to C-1 commercial.

The ruling came in a long-simmering dispute which saw a group of local residents filing suit against the city and McDonald's, a national fast food chain.

McDonald's sought the rezoning of the four lots so it could build a new restaurant, but many area property owners protested, saying the city's action constituted a case of illegal "spot zoning."

There was no indication as to whether there will be an appeal of Chadderdon's decision.

Oil Exports Down

Tehran (AP) — Iranian crude oil exports dropped by 35% in November compared with the same period last year, the National Oil Co. announced.

The announcement said daily production dropped to 3.7 million barrels in November against 5.5 million in November 1974.

Deputy Observant

Moberly, Mo. (UPI) — A state game warden recently fined a man $117.60 for frog hunting without a permit. A deputy sheriff spotted a large pile of frogs on a blanket in the back of a pickup truck and called the warden.

Indians Will Have Party

Omaha (AP) — There will be Christmas for some 125 Indian children in Omaha, despite what a spokesman calls a "rip-off" by a fund-raiser.

Eva Nichols, interim director of Omaha's American Indian Center, said the fund-raiser didn't live up to its agreement with the center. She said the center received only $1,300 of the promised $2,000 to the center.

She said when the center pressed company representatives for the remaining amount and for other details, eight loads of toys were left at a local theater for the center.

She called the toys useless.

Mrs. Nichols said the Army Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Marines now are going to assist with the party, which she said will be "a good one."

Indians Will Have Party

Omaha (AP) — There will be Christmas for some 125 Indian children in Omaha, despite what a spokesman calls a "rip-off" by a fund-raiser.

Eva Nichols, interim director of Omaha's American Indian Center, said the fund-raiser didn't live up to its agreement with the center. She said the center received only $1,300 of the promised $2,000 to the center.

She said when the center pressed company representatives for the remaining amount and for other details, eight loads of toys were left at a local theater for the center.

She called the toys useless.

Mrs. Nichols said the Army Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Marines now are going to assist with the party, which she said will be "a good one."

Stage Line Asked To Rework Plans

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Fairbury — Sponsors of the proposed US 136 Stage Line across southeast Nebraska have been asked to rework their application for federal funding.

However, they are still optimistic the project will be approved in time to begin operation next summer. No more than a three- or four-month delay from the original plan is anticipated.

The announcement of the revamped plans for the project, originally intended to serve 10 counties but now subject to expansion, followed a two-day conference here of state and federal officials.

Cosponsors of the venture are Blue Valley Community Action (BVCA), headquartering in Fairbury, and Southeast Nebraska Community Action (SENCA) of Humboldt. Also present were representatives of the Nebraska Roads Dept. and the State Technical Assistance Agency.

Paul Schrimpf of Kansas City, regional rural affairs specialist with the Community Services Administration, expressed optimism that a "streamlined application" will be accepted. Involving mostly technical changes plus a simplified format, the new application is to be completed by March 1.

'Separate But Linked'

One significant difference is that the two sponsoring agencies will submit "separate but linked" applications. Hopefully both will be funded, but Schrimpf conceded the possibility that either proposal could be disapproved.

In such event, the line would operate only in the eastern or western segment, with Beatrice as an approximate division point. The original routing was from Hastings south to Red Cloud and then east along U.S. 136 to Brownville, with another branch following Neb. 4 to serve several towns to the extreme southeast.

Blue Valley's area includes the counties of Gage, Jefferson, Thayer, Nuckolls, Webster and Adams. SENCA covers Richardson, Johnson, Nemaha and Pawnee. Officials said there is a possibility now of including Cass, Otoe, Clay, Saline and Fillmore counties in the plan.

Greater Flexibility

Jim Crisp, BVCA executive director, said a greater flexibility in the second proposal permits the consideration of running "feeder buses" from some towns off the highway system itself. He stressed that specific details have yet to be worked out.

Suggested as other expansion possibilities are a routing between Crete and Clay Center, also one or two north-south connecting runs for the southeast area. Presumably these would be on Neb. 50 and/or U.S. 73-75.

"Within the time frame we have, we want to allow for as much input from local citizens as possible," said Brad Field, SENCA executive director.

Funding for a two-year demonstration period is estimated at $450,000 for the joint project. A rural highway public transportation program, it is under the authority of the U.S. Transportation Dept.

Older, Blind

Schrimpf, a member of the regional review committee, said one criticism of the original application was that it lacked enough coordination with such other government agencies as the Older Americans and Services for the Blind.

The revised forms must be approved by the Southeast Nebraska Council of Governments, a clearing house agency which balked on the original application but later reconsidered. However, Schrimpf said he anticipates no problem in gaining approval this time.

"Basically, this just involves a streamlining," he explained, "and anything that is done to the application should make it all the more attractive."

Judge Rules 3 Innocent In Jury Tampering Case

Omaha (AP) — U.S. District Judge Albert Schatz directed Wednesday that three of four men be found innocent of charges of conspiracy to bribe a juror.

The judge's directed verdict came after Prosecutor Gary Cornwell rested the government's case against Clarence Matya, Donald Quinn, Paul F. Murphy and his brother, Dale Murphy.

Judge Schatz said he had reviewed all evidence in the 2½ weeks of the trial and found it insufficient to convict Matya and the Murphy brothers.

The judge overruled a defense motion for a directed verdict of innocent for Quinn.

Government prosecutors tried to prove that the four defendants conspired with Frank J. Ryan to buy the vote of a juror who was hearing a gambling case in Omaha in September of 1974.

After dismissal of charges against the three, Quinn's attorney, Warren Zweiback, started presentation of evidence in his client's defense.

Zweiback said the FBI and Ryan, who was working with the FBI, entrapped Quinn illegally into involvement with the jury scheme.

It was disclosed earlier in the trial that Propst's mother was a member of a 1974 gambling case jury, and it was Propst who informed the FBI that attempts might be made to sway her vote in that case.

Papio Creek Dam Project Probe Wanted By Group

Omaha (AP) — An anti-dam group Thursday called for a General Accounting Office (GAO) investigation of the Army Corps of Engineers' spending in the Papio Creek Flood Control and Recreation Project.

The Papio Valley Preservation Association said the corps has proposed spending millions of dollars more than necessary by planning more dams than needed, has exaggerated the potential flood damage and has overestimated the benefits to be derived.

The association called on the GAO to determine the excesses.

The association also called for creation of an independent engineering board to review and resolve conflicts over the dams and to make recommendations for metro-area flood protection.

The association made its statements at a news conference.

Driver Doses, Car Hits Tree In Fatal Crash

Superior (AP) — A Superior man was killed early Thursday when his 19-year-old son, who had just arrived from Ft. Knox, Ky., on Christmas leave, fell asleep at the wheel of the family car.

Three other persons were injured in the one-car crash on Highway 14 about 2½ miles north of Nelson, Nuckolls County authorities reported.

The victim was Donald Moore, 55. His soldier son, Ronald, 19, who had been picked up by the family at Omaha's Eppley Airfield a few hours earlier, was driving, officials said.

Officials said the son apparently fell asleep at the wheel, and the car ran off a curve and slammed into a tree.

Ronald and another son, Gary, 16, along with a third passenger, Tim Stierwalt, also of Superior, were all hospitalized locally. The Moore brothers were listed in stable condition, while Stierwalt was listed in good condition, hospital officials said.

Three-Vehicle Mishap Claims Omahan's Life

Oakland, Iowa (UPI) — An Omaha man was one of two persons killed in a traffic accident on U.S. 6 two miles west of this western Iowa town Wednesday night.

Iowa state troopers said Hutchison was driving a van and Anderson was driving a car when the accident occurred on a bridge over the West Nishnabotna River.

Authorities said a semi-trailer driven by Gary Dreyer of Oakland collided with the two vehicles on the bridge. Dreyer was injured, as were Anderson's wife and three children and a passenger in the van, Walter Wolverton of Omaha.

Officials said the son apparently fell asleep at the wheel, and the car ran off a curve and slammed into a tree.

Ronald and another son, Gary, 16, along with a third passenger, Tim Stuerwalt, also of Superior, were all hospitalized locally. The Moore brothers were listed in stable condition, while Stuerwalt was listed in good condition, hospital officials said.

Three-Vehicle Mishap Claims Omahan's Life

Oakland, Iowa (UPI) — An Omaha man was one of two persons killed in a traffic accident on U.S. 6 two miles west of this western Iowa town Wednesday night.

Iowa state troopers said Hutchison was driving a van and Anderson was driving a car when the accident occurred on a bridge over the West Nishnabotna River.

Authorities said a semi-trailer driven by Gary Dreyer of Oakland collided with the two vehicles on the bridge. Dreyer was injured, as were Anderson's wife and three children and a passenger in the van, Walter Wolverton of Omaha.

Tired Huskers To Face Rested Pacific In Roadrunner Opener

Las Cruces, N.M. — Nebraska's basketball team arrived in El Paso, Tex., after an 11-hour ordeal from Lincoln's sub-zero temperature to a balmy 50 degrees and received an unexpected welcome at the airline terminal.

As the Cornhuskers walked from their plane into the terminal, wearing their red blazers, they were greeted by a Mexican band playing such tunes as the Mexican hat dance and by yellow-jacketed representatives of the Sun Bowl committee.

The committee members promptly started sticking glue-backed Sun Bowl emblems on the jackets, thinking the Huskers were members of the Southern Methodist University basketball team, which was on the same flight headed for a Friday night date with Auburn in the Sun Bowl Tournament.

"I thought you could only bring 10 players," a committeeman said as the red jackets continued to emerge from the plane, obviously not realizing both the Nebraska and SMU teams were passengers.

The Huskers, of course, got a big charge out of the misdirected welcome since their destination was Las Cruces, about 45 miles north of El Paso, and a Friday night game against Pacific University in the Roadrunner Classic.

The topcoats, much needed on departure at 5:45 a.m. from Lincoln's minus 4-degree temperature, quickly were hung in the players' rooms, probably not to be used again until Sunday when the Huskers head for Nashville, Tenn., and a Monday-night game against Vanderbilt.

Pacific Arrives Early

Pacific's cagers got here Wednesday afternoon and had a workout at the Pan American Center on the New Mexico State campus where the tournament will be played. They also worked out late Thursday afternoon.

"Their arrival Wednesdy isn't going to help us any," said Husker coach Joe Cipriano. His team had to leave Lincoln at the early hour because of the United Airlines strike and a foul-up in getting reservations to a Frontier flight to Kansas City.

They had to take three private planes to catch a flight to El Paso.

Figuring that each player had to get up at least by 4:30 a.m., they had been up for 11 hours upon their arrival here. They got in an hour nap before going to their workout time at the tourney site.

On top of that, the change to Mountain Standard Time meant the players faced a 25-hour day.

"We're lucky we haven't missed much practice time during final examinations," Cipriano said. "But I'm worried about all the lost sleep the last week because of finals."

Pacific coach Stan Morrisson said his team's early arrival wasn't by design. "Airline connections would have put us in here very late this (Thursday) evening and we would have missed our workout," he said. "Also, our classes have ended and we would have had to pay for lodging and meals even if we had stayed on the campus another day."

"Nebraska has played a very tough schedule," said Morrisson who learned a lot of his basketball as an assistant to famed coach Pete Newell at California. "And I have a very high regard for the Nebraska basketball coach. Joe (Cipriano) is a fine coach, and Moe Iba has had an influence on the good defense they play."

Sports Signals

By Bob Owens
Star Sports Editor

"I've heard nothing but great things about Jerry Fort. Nebraska is a veteran team, but we're very young," he said.

Cipriano Expects Zone

Cipriano expects Pacific may try to play a zone defense and use a taller lineup against the Huskers than Morrison has been starting.

Morrison admits he has used four tall players at times when he has played a zone this season. He has 6-9 George Fowler at center, 7-0 Steve Manker and 6-11 Tim Halemeier at forwards and 6-7 guard Myron Jordan.

Actually, Nebraska hasn't had trouble running its zone offense but the Huskers have had trouble putting the ball in the basket despite getting good shots.

"We're just not a good-shooting team so far," Cipriano said. The Huskers are hitting just .447 from the field.

"We're going to try to get the ball up the floor quicker than we've been doing," he said. "And hope we get some open shots at the end of the break for Bob (Siegel) and Fort. We haven't made a major change in our offense, but we're going back more to what we were doing last year. We've been getting better shot selection, but we just haven't been hitting."

The Huskers' 2-3 record is the worst in the tournament, but the three losses have been by a total of 21 points to teams that have just lost one game among them. Illinois fell to Furman, while Iowa and Washington are still undefeated.

Roadrunner Notes

Denver coach Al Harden, whose team faces host New Mexico State in the second game Friday night, is one guy who doesn't have to worry about the 10-man travel limit. He has only eight eligible players with him.

Currently, four Denver basketballers are ineligible, but he hopes to get a couple of them back after grades come out next week. He explained that incompletes count as an F at Denver until the course is completed.

Note to Gov. Exon: a brochure here describes Las Cruces as the home of "The Good Life." No one knows if the slogan was stolen from Nebraska or if Nebraska did the stealing.

"The Sun Shines over 350 Days a year in Las Cruces and the Sky's Blue," the brochure says.

Las Cruces is a growing city of 50,000 — second largest in New Mexico . . . the city is near the largest pecan orchard (4,000 acres) in the world . . . irrigation permits many agricultural products in the area even though the land looks desolate.

The name of Las Cruces (the City of the Crosses) dates back to 1830 when a group of about 40 travelers from Taos, Mexico was slaughtered by Apaches. The forest of crosses which marks the burials suggested the name.

And that's today's geography lesson.

Rockets Eye NWU's Gym

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Nebraska Wesleyan's Ira Taylor Gym isn't Lincoln Northeast's home basketball base. But then, that depends on how one chooses to look at it.

The Rockets play only two games on NWU's floor this season, starting with Friday night's Eastern I-80 Conference encounter against Papillion.

"I suspect most of 'em have been here a few times," Northeast coach Ed Johnson said with a grin after Wednesday's practice at Wesleyan.

"I don't know how many times they get over here during the summer and fall," he added, "but however many times it is, I wish it were more."

Last season, Northeast played a non-conference game against Omaha Benson during the early season at Wesleyan. The place was packed with fans, but the result was disappointing. Northeast lost.

Closest Gym

"We enjoyed getting the capacity crowd," Johnson said. "Wesleyan is about the closest gym to our end of town and people kind of enjoy going there."

It's the Rocket fans' only chance to see their team in home territory. "It's darn tough not to have a home gym," Johnson said. "It's tough sledding. But, of course, we've faced it for years."

Johnson is blessed with a new facility for his team to practice, but the gym has no spectator seating.

Success has helped offset the lack of a home gym, Johnson admitted. "We've been real fortunate down through the years," he said. "I'm sure we'd get no sympathy from other coaches about not having a gym."

The 26-year Northeast head coach hopes "we've corrected some of our faults" for the Papillion matchup. "I hope we've come along on our defense."

Lost Last Year

He's expecting another close battle with the Monarchs after "last year's tossup game when we had opportunities to win, but didn't get the job done.

"I hope we can play with them," he added. "They're pretty big. Their 6-6 center is a good basketball player. We haven't been able to form much of an opinion yet. This should help us get one of ourselves."

Two more games are scheduled in the Capital City Friday night. Ralston invades Lincoln East for an Eastern I-80 game and Lincoln High hosts Beatrice in a non-conference contest at Johnson Gym.

In other Friday night games, Lincoln Southeast plays at Omaha Gross and Lincoln Pius X plays at Minden. In the only Saturday night game involving a Lincoln team, East plays at Omaha Westside (87th and Pacific Sts.)

Friday night's East-Ralston game will be televised by Cablevision on channel 6, starting at 7:30 p.m. with Prep Panorama, featuring an interview with Virgil Horne, supervisor of student activities for the Lincoln Public Schools.

Jones, Drew Propel Atlanta Past Lakers

From News Wires

Dwight Jones, John Drew and 18-year-old Bill Willoughby all turned into scorers in the final quarter Thursday night to lead the Atlanta Hawks to a 114-98 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers in Atlanta.

That was the only National Basketball Association game. In American Basketball Association action, San Antonio downed Louisville, 115-102 in Louisville and Virginia stopped the New York Nets, 94-90, in overtime.

The Lakers trailed by only four points, 76-72, at the end of three periods but Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who got only four of his 32 points in the final period, visibly tired and the fast-breaking Hawks quickly jumped into a commanding lead and kept adding to it right up to the end.

Jones, outplaying and outhustling Abdul-Jabbar in the final period, scored 10 points in the final period and Drew and Willoughby both had nine in the fourth quarter. Tom Henderson was high scorer for Atlanta with 21 points. Drew had 20, Jones 16 and Willoughby a career high of 13.

Meanwhile, San Antonio unleashed George Gervin for 32 points, Larry Kenon for 24 and James Silas for 22 as the Spurs thrashed Kentucky before the smallest Freedom Hall crowd in the Colonels' history, 2,761.

In handing the Colonels their fourth straight defeat, San Antonio exploded for 12 straight points in the second quarter to take a 53-40 lead.

The Colonels were paced by Artis Gilmore with 25 points and Marv Roberts, elevated to a starting role at forward, with 24.

Kenon was the game's leading rebounder with 20 as the Colonels lost to the Spurs for the fourth straight time.

Maurice Lucas, acquired from the Spirits of St. Louis in a trade for Caldwell Jones, joined the team just before the game and scored four points in 15 minutes.

Virginia had overcome an 88-84 New York advantage with 2:11 remaining in regulation play.

Mike Green added 18 points for the Squires and snared 13 rebounds while Jan Van Breda Kolff had 13 points and 13 rebounds.

Julius Erving led the Nets with 28 points. Al Skinner and Brian Taylor each added 14 while Bill Melchionni hit for 11.

Virginia led after the first quarter, 25-23, but the Nets prevailed at halftime, 55-39.

The Squires led after the third quarter at 73-68 and led most of the fourth quarter.

Missouri Falls To UCLA, 83-71

Los Angeles (UPI) — Richard Washington scored 25 points and Marques Johnson and Ralph Drollinger added 14 each Thursday night as UCLA defeated previously unbeaten Missouir 83-71.

UCLA put the game out of reach with a 13-0 blitz during a five-minute stretch in the first half. The Bruins led 44-32 at the intermission and the Tigers, who trailed by as many as 24 points in the second half, never got closer than 10.

UCLA improved its season record to 4-1 and the Tigers dropped to 6-1.

The fifth-ranked Bruins host Seattle University Saturday night while Missouri heads for Honolulu for Saturday and Monday games with the University of Hawaii.

NFL To Allow Home Telecasts Of Playoffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League promised Thursday to allow home telecasts of its playoff games despite failure by House and Senate conferees to reach agreement on extending the anti-blackout law that expires Dec. 31.

A representative of the league told Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., that the league would continue to permit telecasts of the playoffs as if the current law still existed.

He was told the NFL intended to allow the telecasts as if the law were still in existence after Dec. 31.

The two main points of dispute between the House and Senate focus on whether to extend the blackout radius from 57 miles to 125 miles and whether the law should be made permanent or extended for three years.

The original law has been in effect since 1973.

The Senate version of the bill calls for a three-year extension and a 125-mile blackout radius. The House version calls for retaining the 75 miles and making the law permanent.

Pastore offered to agree to a four-year extension if the House conferees would accept the 125-mile radius. They did not.

In addition to regular season and post-season football games, the new law also would extend anti-blackout provisions to post-season championship games in professional baseball, hockey and basketball.

That law permits home telecasts of games if stadium tickets are sold out at least 24 hours in advance of the kickoff.

The House and Senate have passed extension legislation, but differences in the two bills meant a conference committee would have to reach a compromise before the expiration date.

However, Pastore and Rep. Torbert H. MacDonald said the conferees could not agree on two key issues.

When asked whether that meant the law would expire and the playoff games could be blacked out, Pastore said: "They won't be."

Then he turned to a representative of the NFL in the audience and said: "You won't blackout the playoffs, will you?"

Beware Of Fiesta Tickets!

Phoenix, Ariz. — Officials of the Fiesta Bowl have indicated to University of Nebraska ticket manager Jim Pittenger a warning should be issued Big Red football fans.

According to bowl officials, a possibility of counterfeit football tickets for the Dec. 26 game exists and fans should be wary of purchasing tickets from scalpers.

It has been reported ticket scalping for this year's Fiesta Bowl is at an alltime high.

Defense Propels City Girl Cagers

Defense was the name of the game Thursday night in Lincoln high school girls' basketball action as Northeast downed Fremont 29-24 and Southeast beat York 39-28.

Northeast opened with a full-court, man-to-man press and blitzed to an 8-2 quarter lead in the Northeast gym. Fortunately for the Rockets their defense was tough as they suffered through a poor shooting night hitting 11 of 66 field goals for 17 per cent.

Teri Bullock scored six of her game-high total of 11 points in the third quarter when Northeast pulled away from an 11-10 halftime lead to post its second win of the season without a loss.

Tami Forbes chipped in seven points and Pam Samuelson six to the Rocket attack. Vicki Carsey was the leading scorer for Fremont, now 0-1, with six points.

Southeast won its season opener in the Knight gym using a tough 1-2-2 zone defense against the Dukes to build a commanding 19-9 halftime advantage.

Suzanne Sutton and Kelly O'Neal led Southeast's scoring with 16 and 11 points, respectively. Sutton also grabbed 11 rebounds.

Defense also was important as Lincoln High overcame a first-quarter Papillion lead to win, 54-33, at Papillion.

The Links switched from a zone to a man-to-man, half-court press at the end of the first quarter with Papillion leading, 8-5. The change boosted Lincoln High to a 22-14 halftime lead.

Robin Hruby and Pat Bowling led Lincoln High with 13 and 12 points, respectively. Hruby and Rachel Hillman shared the rebounding lead with nine apiece.

Las Cruces, N. Mex. — You wouldn't call the Pan American Center, site of the Roadrunner Classic Friday and Saturday, a "snake pit" because it's a bright, relatively new facility.

Yet, when the host New Mexico State Aggies play there, they're tough to beat.

There are two examples so far this season to back up the favored role the Aggies will have when Nebraska and Pacific University open the sixth annual basketball invitational at 8 p.m., Lincoln time, Friday night.

The Aggies have lost twice this season and have had one narrow escape — all three games on the road. They've won five times before the friendly home fans.

Coach Ken Hayes' lost on rival New Mexico's home court 85-70 on Dec. 9, but three days later here the Aggies won 82-68. On successive nights, New Mexico State squeezed by Texas-El Paso 49-47 at El Paso and won 62-54 here.

On Tuesday night, New Mexico State went to Dallas and lost to Southern Methodist 94-87.

Nebraska has been rated a favorite to beat Pacific by from six to ten points while New Mexico State is listed to win by from 17 to 24 points over Denver in the other first round game.

Consolation and championship games will be played Saturday night.

Pan American Center has been in use since 1968 and is one of the finest basketball facilities in the Southwest. It seats 13,222.

It was the site of the NCAA Midwest Regional last season and has been used for two NCAA first round playoffs.

In four games this season, New Mexico State has played before 33,200 fans, including over 11,000 for the games with nearby rivals New Mexico and UTEP.

Texas President Backs Probes Of Alleged Payoffs

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — University of Texas President Dr. Lorene Rogers said Thursday the school will support a probe being conducted by the Travis District Attorney's odfice and will conduct its own investigation into charges that athletes received state salaries for work they did not do.

The university administration became involved in the investigation Thursday with President Lorene Rogers' announcement that she—not athletic director Darrell Royal—would be the spokesman in the matter.

She said she decided to assume that role after talking to Royal, who returned from a recruiting trip to resume preparations for Texas' Astro-Buebonnet Bowl game against Colorado Dec. 27.

Dr. Rogers said she had not decided who would conduct the school's investigation, but she planned to make public that information Tuesday.

"We're considering two or three ways to go about an investigation," said Dr. Rogers, meaning a separate probe from that being done by the Travis County district attorney's office.

The district attorney's investigation is a spinoff from one on Senate Secretary Charles Schnabel, which started after a former Senate employe alleged that Schnabel had used Senate printing facilities for private business.

Published reports revealed that at least four athletes, including wide receiver Alfred Jackson, earned money even after they had quit going to work in the summer.

This would violate state law and NCAA rules.

Royal emerged from a meeting of the Athletic Council and said that Dr. Rogers "has taken the responsibility" of responding to inquiries about the university's position in the investigation.

Royal said, however, that neither parents nor prospective recruits had mentioned the investigation on his visits to El Paso, Dallas and Houston.

J. Neils Thompson, the university's representative to the Southwest Conference, has said he was investigating reports that athletes have received unearned pay.

A spokesman for the district attorney's office said investigators also are checking whether the athletes' salaries exceeded those of regular employes who had been hired to do the same work.

Some of the athletes mentioned in connection with the investigation seemed perplexed with the disclosure that they may have done something illegal. Freshman tackle Terrance Tschatschula, for example, was said to be near tears Thursday after his mother called from Germany saying she had heard that he had admitted getting paid for a portion of August after quitting to take part in fall football workouts.

Tired Huskers To Face Rested Pacific In Roadrunner Opener

Las Cruces, N.M. — Nebraska's basketball team arrived in El Paso, Tex., after an 11-hour ordeal from Lincoln's sub-zero temperature to a balmy 50 degrees and received an unexpected welcome at the airline terminal.

As the Cornhuskers walked from their plane into the terminal, wearing their red blazers, they were greeted by a Mexican band playing such tunes as the Mexican hat dance and by yellow-jacketed representatives of the Sun Bowl committee.

The committee members promptly started sticking glue-backed Sun Bowl emblems on the jackets, thinking the Huskers were members of the Southern Methodist University basketball team, which was on the same flight headed for a Friday night date with Auburn in the Sun Bowl Tournament.

"I thought you could only bring 10 players," a committeeman said as the red jackets continued to emerge from the plane, obviously not realizing both the Nebraska and SMU teams were passengers.

The Huskers, of course, got a big charge out of the misdirected welcome since their destination was Las Cruces, about 45 miles north of El Paso, and a Friday night game against Pacific University in the Roadrunner Classic.

The topcoats, much needed on departure at 5:45 a.m. from Lincoln's minus 4-degree temperature, quickly were hung in the players' rooms, probably not to be used again until Sunday when the Huskers head for Nashville, Tenn., and a Monday-night game against Vanderbilt.

Pacific Arrives Early

Pacific's cagers got here Wednesday afternoon and had a workout at the Pan American Center on the New Mexico State campus where the tournament will be played. They also worked out late Thursday afternoon.

"Their arrival Wednesdy isn't going to help us any," said Husker coach Joe Cipriano. His team had to leave Lincoln at the early hour because of the United Airlines strike and a foul-up in getting reservations to a Frontier flight to Kansas City.

They had to take three private planes to catch a flight to El Paso.

Figuring that each player had to get up at least by 4:30 a.m., they had been up for 11 hours upon their arrival here. They got in an hour nap before going to their workout time at the tourney site.

On top of that, the change to Mountain Standard Time meant the players faced a 25-hour day.

"We're lucky we haven't missed much practice time during final examinations," Cipriano said. "But I'm worried about all the lost sleep the last week because of finals."

Pacific coach Stan Morrisson said his team's early arrival wasn't by design. "Airline connections would have put us in here very late this (Thursday) evening and we would have missed our workout," he said. "Also, our classes have ended and we would have had to pay for lodging and meals even if we had stayed on the campus another day."

"Nebraska has played a very tough schedule," said Morrisson who learned a lot of his basketball as an assistant to famed coach Pete Newell at California. "And I have a very high regard for the Nebraska basketball coach. Joe (Cipriano) is a fine coach, and Moe Iba has had an influence on the good defense they play."

Sports Signals

"I've heard nothing but great things about Jerry Fort. Nebraska is a veteran team, but we're very young," he said.

Cipriano Expects Zone

Cipriano expects Pacific may try to play a zone defense and use a taller lineup against the Huskers than Morrison has been starting.

Morrison admits he has used four tall players at times when he has played a zone this season. He has 6-9 George Fowler at center, 7-0 Steve Manker and 6-11 Tim Halemeier at forwards and 6-7 guard Myron Jordan.

Actually, Nebraska hasn't had trouble running its zone offense but the Huskers have had trouble putting the ball in the basket despite getting good shots.

"We're just not a good-shooting team so far," Cipriano said. The Huskers are hitting just .447 from the field.

"We're going to try to get the ball up the floor quicker than we've been doing," he said. "And hope we get some open shots at the end of the break for Bob (Siegel) and Fort. We haven't made a major change in our offense, but we're going back more to what we were doing last year. We've been getting better shot selection, but we just haven't been hitting."

The Huskers' 2-3 record is the worst in the tournament, but the three losses have been by a total of 21 points to teams that have just lost one game among them. Illinois fell to Furman, while Iowa and Washington are still undefeated.

Roadrunner Notes

Denver coach Al Harden, whose team faces host New Mexico State in the second game Friday night, is one guy who doesn't have to worry about the 10-man travel limit. He has only eight eligible players with him.

Currently, four Denver basketballers are ineligible, but he hopes to get a couple of them back after grades come out next week. He explained that incompletes count as an F at Denver until the course is completed.

Note to Gov. Exon: a brochure here describes Las Cruces as the home of "The Good Life." No one knows if the slogan was stolen from Nebraska or if Nebraska did the stealing.

"The Sun Shines over 350 Days a year in Las Cruces and the Sky's Blue," the brochure says.

Las Cruces is a growing city of 50,000 — second largest in New Mexico . . . the city is near the largest pecan orchard (4,000 acres) in the world . . . irrigation permits many agricultural products in the area even though the land looks desolate.

The name of Las Cruces (the City of the Crosses) dates back to 1830 when a group of about 40 travelers from Taos, Mexico was slaughtered by Apaches. The forest of crosses which marks the burials suggested the name.

And that's today's geography lesson.

Rockets Eye NWU's Gym

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Nebraska Wesleyan's Ira Taylor Gym isn't Lincoln Northeast's home basketball base. But then, that depends on how one chooses to look at it.

The Rockets play only two games on NWU's floor this season, starting with Friday night's Eastern I-80 Conference encounter against Papillion.

"I suspect most of 'em have been here a few times," Northeast coach Ed Johnson said with a grin after Wednesday's practice at Wesleyan.

"I don't know how many times they get over here during the summer and fall," he added, "but however many times it is, I wish it were more."

Last season, Northeast played a non-conference game against Omaha Benson during the early season at Wesleyan. The place was packed with fans, but the result was disappointing. Northeast lost.

Closest Gym

"We enjoyed getting the capacity crowd," Johnson said. "Wesleyan is about the closest gym to our end of town and people kind of enjoy going there."

It's the Rocket fans' only chance to see their team in home territory. "It's darn tough not to have a home gym," Johnson said. "It's tough sledding. But, of course, we've faced it for years."

Johnson is blessed with a new facility for his team to practice, but the gym has no spectator seating.

Success has helped offset the lack of a home gym, Johnson admitted. "We've been real fortunate down through the years," he said. "I'm sure we'd get no sympathy from other coaches about not having a gym."

The 26-year Northeast head coach hopes "we've corrected some of our faults" for the Papillion matchup. "I hope we've come along on our defense."

Lost Last Year

He's expecting another close battle with the Monarchs after "last year's tossup game when we had opportunities to win, but didn't get the job done.

"I hope we can play with them," he added. "They're pretty big. Their 6-6 center is a good basketball player. We haven't been able to form much of an opinion yet. This should help us get one of ourselves."

Two more games are scheduled in the Capital City Friday night. Ralston invades Lincoln East for an Eastern I-80 game and Lincoln High hosts Beatrice in a non-conference contest at Johnson Gym.

In other Friday night games, Lincoln Southeast plays at Omaha Gross and Lincoln Pius X plays at Minden. In the only Saturday night game involving a Lincoln team, East plays at Omaha Westside (87th and Pacific Sts.)

Friday night's East-Ralston game will be televised by Cablevision on channel 6, starting at 7:30 p.m. with Prep Panorama, featuring an interview with Virgil Horne, supervisor of student activities for the Lincoln Public Schools.

Jones, Drew Propel Atlanta Past Lakers

From News Wires

Dwight Jones, John Drew and 18-year-old Bill Willoughby all turned into scorers in the final quarter Thursday night to lead the Atlanta Hawks to a 114-98 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers in Atlanta.

That was the only National Basketball Association game. In American Basketball Association action, San Antonio downed Louisville, 115-102 in Louisville and Virginia stopped the New York Nets, 94-90, in overtime.

The Lakers trailed by only four points, 76-72, at the end of three periods but Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who got only four of his 32 points in the final period, visibly tired and the fast-breaking Hawks quickly jumped into a commanding lead and kept adding to it right up to the end.

Jones, outplaying and outhustling Abdul-Jabbar in the final period, scored 10 points in the final period and Drew and Willoughby both had nine in the fourth quarter. Tom Henderson was high scorer for Atlanta with 21 points. Drew had 20. Jones 16 and Willoughby a career high of 13.

Meanwhile, San Antonio unleashed George Gervin for 32 points, Larry Kenon for 24 and James Silas for 22 as the Spurs thrashed Kentucky before the smallest Freedom Hall crowd in the Colonels' history, 2,761.

In handing the Colonels their fourth straight defeat, San Antonio exploded for 12 straight points in the second quarter to take a 53-40 lead.

The Colonels were paced by Artis Gilmore with 25 points and Marv Roberts, elevated to a starting role at forward, with 24.

Kenon was the game's leading rebounder with 20 as the Colonels lost to the Spurs for the fourth straight time.

Maurice Lucas, acquired from the Spirits of St. Louis in a trade for Caldwell Jones, joined the team just before the game and scored four points in 15 minutes.

Virginia had overcome an 88-84 New York advantage with 2:11 remaining in regulation play.

Mike Green added 18 points for the Squires and snared 13 rebounds while Jan Van Breda Kolff had 13 points and 13 rebounds.

Julius Erving led the Nets with 28 points. Al Skinner and Brian Taylor each added 14 while Bill Melchionni hit for 11.

Virginia led after the first quarter, 25-23, but the Nets prevailed at halftime, 55-39.

The Squires led after the third quarter at 73-68 and led most of the fourth quarter.

Missouri Falls To UCLA, 83-71

Los Angeles (UPI) — Richard Washington scored 25 points and Marques Johnson and Ralph Drollinger added 14 each Thursday night as UCLA defeated previously unbeaten Missouir 83-71.

UCLA put the game out of reach with a 13-0 blitz during a five-minute stretch in the first half. The Bruins led 44-32 at the intermission and the Tigers, who trailed by as many as 24 points in the second half, never got closer than 10.

UCLA improved its season record to 4-1 and the Tigers dropped to 6-1.

The fifth-ranked Bruins host Seattle University Saturday night while Missouri heads for Honolulu for Saturday and Monday games with the University of Hawaii.

Las Cruces, N. Mex. — You wouldn't call the Pan American Center, site of the Roadrunner Classic Friday and Saturday, a "snake pit" because it's a bright, relatively new facility.

Yet, when the host New Mexico State Aggies play there, they're tough to beat.

There are two examples so far this season to back up the favored role the Aggies will have when Nebraska and Pacific University open the sixth annual basketball invitational at 8 p.m., Lincoln time, Friday night.

The Aggies have lost twice this season and have had one narrow escape — all three games on the road. They've won five times before the friendly home fans.

Coach Ken Hayes' lost on rival New Mexico's home court 85-70 on Dec. 9, but three days later here the Aggies won 82-68. On successive nights, New Mexico State squeezed by Texas-El Paso 49-47 at El Paso and won 62-54 here.

On Tuesday night, New Mexico State went to Dallas and lost to Southern Methodist 94-87.

Nebraska has been rated a favorite to beat Pacific by from six to ten points while New Mexico State is listed to win by from 17 to 24 points over Denver in the other first round game.

Consolation and championship games will be played Saturday night.

Pan American Center has been in use since 1968 and is one of the finest basketball facilities in the Southwest. It seats 13,222.

It was the site of the NCAA Midwest Regional last season and has been used for two NCAA first round playoffs.

In four games this season, New Mexico State has played before 33,200 fans, including over 11,000 for the games with nearby rivals New Mexico and UTEP.

NFL To Allow Home Telecasts Of Playoffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League promised Thursday to allow home telecasts of its playoff games despite failure by House and Senate conferees to reach agreement on extending the anti-blackout law that expires Dec. 31.

A representative of the league told Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., that the league would continue to permit telecasts of the playoffs as if the current law still existed.

That law permits home telecasts of games if stadium tickets are sold out at least 24 hours in advance of the kickoff.

The House and Senate have passed extension legislation, but differences in the two bills meant a conference committee would have to reach a compromise before the expiration date.

However, Pastore and Rep. Torbert H. MacDonald said the conferees could not agree on two key issues.

When asked whether that meant the law would expire and the playoff games could be blacked out, Pastore said: "They won't be."

Then he turned to a representative of the NFL in the audience and said: "You won't blackout the playoffs, will you?"

He was told the NFL intended to allow the telecasts as if the law were still in existence after Dec. 31.

The two main points of dispute between the House and Senate focus on whether to extend the blackout radius from 57 miles to 125 miles and whether the law should be made permanent or extended for three years.

The original law has been in effect since 1973.

The Senate version of the bill calls for a three-year extension and a 125-mile blackout radius. The House version calls for retaining the 75 miles and making the law permanent.

Pastore offered to agree to a four-year extension if the House conferees would accept the 125-mile radius. They did not.

In addition to regular season and post-season football games, the new law also would extend anti-blackout provisions to post-season championship games in professional baseball, hockey and basketball.

Beware Of Fiesta Tickets!

Phoenix, Ariz. — Officials of the Fiesta Bowl have indicated to University of Nebraska ticket manager Jim Pittenger a warning should be issued Big Red football fans.

According to bowl officials, a possibility of counterfeit football tickets for the Dec. 26 game exists and fans should be wary of purchasing tickets from scalpers.

It has been reported ticket scalping for this year's Fiesta Bowl is at an alltime high.

Defense Propels City Girl Cagers

Defense was the name of the game Thursday night in Lincoln high school girls' basketball action as Northeast downed Fremont 29-24 and Southeast beat York 39-28.

Northeast opened with a full-court, man-to-man press and blitzed to an 8-2 quarter lead in the Northeast gym. Fortunately for the Rockets their defense was tough as they suffered through a poor shooting night hitting 11 of 66 field goals for 17 per cent.

Teri Bullock scored six of her game-high total of 11 points in the third quarter when Northeast pulled away from an 11-10 halftime lead to post its second win of the season without a loss.

Tami Forbes chipped in seven points and Pam Samuelson six to the Rocket attack. Vicki Carsey was the leading scorer for Fremont, now 0-1, with six points.

Southeast won its season opener in the Knight gym using a tough 1-2-2 zone defense against the Dukes to build a commanding 19-9 halftime advantage.

Suzanne Sutton and Kelly O'Neal led Southeast's scoring with 16 and 11 points, respectively. Sutton also grabbed 11 rebounds.

Defense also was important as Lincoln High overcame a first-quarter Papillion lead to win, 54-33, at Papillion.

The Links switched from a zone to a man-to-man, half-court press at the end of the first quarter with Papillion leading, 8-5. The change boosted Lincoln High to a 22-14 halftime lead.

Robin Hruby and Pat Bowling led Lincoln High with 13 and 12 points, respectively. Hruby and Rachel Hillman shared the rebounding lead with nine apiece.

Texas President Backs Probes Of Alleged Payoffs

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — University of Texas President Dr. Lorene Rogers said Thursday the school will support a probe being conducted by the Travis District Attorney's office and will conduct its own investigation into charges that athletes received state salaries for work they did not do.

The university administration became involved in the investigation Thursday with President Lorene Rogers' announcement that she—not athletic director Darrell Royal—would be the spokesman in the matter.

She said she decided to assume that role after talking to Royal, who returned from a recruiting trip to resume preparations for Texas' Astro-Buebonnet Bowl game against Colorado Dec. 27.

Dr. Rogers said she had not decided who would conduct the school's investigation, but she planned to make public that information Tuesday.

"We're considering two or three ways to go about an investigation," said Dr. Rogers, meaning a separate probe from that being done by the Travis County district attorney's office.

The district attorney's investigation is a spinoff from one on Senate Secretary Charles Schnabel, which started after a former Senate employe alleged that Schnabel had used Senate printing facilities for private business.

Published reports revealed that at least four athletes, including wide receiver Alfred Jackson, earned money even after they had quit going to work in the summer.

This would violate state law and NCAA rules.

Royal emerged from a meeting of the Athletic Council and said that Dr. Rogers "has taken the responsibility" of responding to inquiries about the university's position in the investigation.

Royal said, however, that neither parents nor prospective recruits had mentioned the investigation on his visits to El Paso, Dallas and Houston.

J. Neils Thompson, the university's representative to the Southwest Conference, has said he was investigating reports that athletes have received unearned pay.

A spokesman for the district attorney's office said investigators also are checking whether the athletes' salaries exceeded those of regular employes who had been hired to do the same work.

Some of the athletes mentioned in connection with the investigation seemed perplexed with the disclosure that they may have done something illegal. Freshman tackle Terrance Tschatschula, for example, was said to be near tears Thursday after his mother called from Germany saying she had heard that he had admitted getting paid for a portion of August after quitting to take part in fall football workouts.

Wolf Sparks Hastings

At the half, Hastings held a narrow 45-42 lead over the Lancers. But the double digit scoring of six Broncos stretched the lead 79-60 midway through the second half.

Late in the second half, Mt. Marty pulled within six points, but the Broncos rallied to victory.

Martin Goals Spark Buffalo

From News Wires

Winger Rick Martin scored his third hat trick of the season, including two goals in the first 49 seconds of the game as the Buffalo Sabres snapped the Minnesota North Stars' four-game winning streak, 5-2, Thursday night at Buffalo.

The victory also snapped a two-game Sabres' losing streak.

The Sabres' Don Luce made it 3-0 about five minutes after Martin's second goal on assists from Craig Ramsay and defenseman Jocelyn Guevremont.

There was no scoring in the second period and Martin's third goal and 18th of the season was the only score during the final period.

Howatt was forced to poke at a lose puck two different times in front of Toronto goaltender Wayne Thomas until he finally pushed it into the net. Andre St. Laurent and Bob Nystrom assisted.

St. Laurent got the Islanders started when he tied the score 1-1 at 17:18 of the first period, scoring from directly on front of the Toronto goal. Stan Weir had given Toronto a 1-0 lead when he was credited with a disputed goal at 11:10. New York goalie Billy Smith knocked the puck over his own goal line for the Leaf score.

In the second period, Clark Gillies took a Bryan Trottier pass and scored to put New York ahead 2-1 at 9:09. Fifty-six seconds later, Pat Boutette tied it for Toronto with help from Ian Turnbull and Don Ashby.

Howatt's game-winner followed. J.P. Parise then clinched the contest for New York at 12:03 of the final period, scoring from close up on passes from Jude Drouin and Dave Lewis.

Introducing Dodge Aspen. It's priced lower than Pacer. And has more total room than Cadillac Seville.

Aspen got 27 MPG highway. 18 MPG city. According to official 1976 EPA mileage estimates for an Aspen sedan equipped with a 225 Six and manual transmission. Your actual mileage may differ depending on how and where you drive, the condition of your car, and its optional equipment.

Aspen has more total room than Cadillac Seville. Aspen may be a small car on the outside, but it's a big car on the inside. When you add up the front and rear leg-, head-, shoulder-, and hiproom, an Aspen sedan has over 15 inches more total room than a Cadillac Seville. And for a car that costs about a third as much as a Seville, that's unbelievable.

Martin Goals Spark Buffalo

From News Wires

Winger Rick Martin scored his third hat trick of the season, including two goals in the first 49 seconds of the game as the Buffalo Sabres snapped the Minnesota North Stars' four-game winning streak, 5-2, Thursday night at Buffalo

The victory also snapped a two-game Sabres' losing streak

The Sabres' Don Luce made it 3-0 about five minutes after Martin's second goal on assists from Craig Ramsay and defenseman Jocelyn Guevremont

But Guevremont scored on a 30-foot shot with assists from McNab and Martin to make it 4-2 with about three minutes left in the opening period

There was no scoring in the second period and Martin's third goal and 18th of the season was the only score during the final period

Howatt was forced to poke at a lose puck two different times in front of Toronto goaltender Wayne Thomas until he finally pushed it into the net Andre St Laurent and Bob Nystrom assisted

St Laurent got the Islanders started when he tied the score 1-1 at 17 18 of the first period, scoring from directly on front of the Toronto goal Stan Weir had given Toronto a 1-0 lead when he was credited with a disputed goal at 11 10 New York goalie Billy Smith knocked the puck over his own goal line for the Leaf score

In the second period, Clark Gillies took a Bryan Trottier pass and scored to put New York ahead 2-1 at 9 09 Fifty-six seconds later, Pat Boutette tied it for Toronto with help from Ian Turnbull and Don Ashby

Howatt's game-winner followed J P Parise then clinched the contest for New York at 12 03 of the final period, scoring from close up on passes from Jude Drouin and Dave Lewis

Walton Endures Injuries

Portland, Ore. (AP) — "For a while I was a mess," said Bill Walton, injury-plagued center for the Portland Trail Blazers of the National Basketball Association.

Since joining the Blazers as their No. 1 draft choice in 1974, Walton has endured knee surgery, a sprained finger, a lingering bone spur on his ankle, strep throat, a sprained ankle, a broken toe, bruised cheek, cut eye and subsequent car accident and ankle sprain.

"You can't let the frustrations get you down," he said. "If I didn't like playing basketball so much, I probably wouldn't have this attitude. But what I want to do most right now is play basketball."

He hasn't played for several days and is doubtful for Saturday's home game against New Orleans. The Golden State Warriors visit Portland Sunday.

"I really felt well for the first time in Chicago last week," the 6-foot-11 Walton said. "I was getting in shape again, my ankle was still weak, but it was feeling good.

"Then I went up in the air, and the next thing I knew I landed on my wrist."

With his wrist heavily taped because of a hairline fracture, Walton took the floor three days later against the Washington Bullets. Overguarding Wes Unseld, he dislocated the middle and ring fingers on his right hand.

"It was one of the most painful injuries I've had," he said.

More Sports, Page 32

especially when you are in a lot of agony. Mostly you want tomorrow to hurry up and get here."

With both hands disabled, Walton had trouble eating, bathing and dressing.

"You keep hoping every injury will be the last one," Walton said Wednesday, fingering putty in his right hand, still waiting for the swelling to subside in his injured fingers.

The All-American from UCLA says he is injured so often because he is active in the game.

"In my first two years at high school in San Diego, I broke an ankle, broke a leg, had knee surgery and broke four or five bones in my foot all at different times," Walton said "I was just real active."

No accidents occurred for the next six years until he suffered a back injury against Washington State during his senior year with the Bruins' legendary championship team.

"You have ups and downs in basketball," said Walton. "You can't get over-confident when you are up. You have to keep things in perspective.

"The same is true when you are down. You can't lose your perspective. You have to minimize your frustration."

After so many setbacks, how?

"Well, I have to admit I'm running out of techniques," he said, laughing. "But maybe there won't be any more."

Walton, who added more than 30 pounds to his lanky frame last summer with a combination of strenuous workouts and huge vegetarian meals, weighed in at 255 pounds at the start of this season.

"I spent the summer playing basketball, volleyball, weightlifting, swimming, running, riding my bicycle, getting ready," he said. "For a lot of people it would have been work, but it was fun for me."

Walton said he believes in "feeling I always must give my best in athletics. I'm always looking for a way to improve my game."

Much of that looking in the last 18 months has been from the bench.

"I'm not used to sitting on the bench," Walton said. "I see things I think I could helpthe Blazers with, but you have to remember one man doesn't make a team."

Handicapper Makes Odds Favor Gambler

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Gambling is a risk, but sports handicapper Mort Olshan says he can put the odds in your favor.

Olshan has edited the Gold Sheet, a sports forecasting paper, for 19 years and has recently published a book, "Winning Theories of Sports Handicapping."

"I think despite what psychiatrists say, there are two main reasons people gamble," he said. "There's the inexplicable excitement. It gives you, in compacted form, a tremendous high, a tremendous escape from the despair, the problems you have.

"It is a strong enough pull that you can leave your problems behind. It's also an intellectual excercise."

He said a lot of people knock gambling and say money shouldn't be wasted that way, but Olshan compared the gambler to the person who spends $25 a day on golf.

"Obviously there are sick people who are compulsive gamblers," he admitted. "They want to win so desperately they are blinded to the realities. Anyone who calls us (Gold Sheet) and is disatisified, we give them their money back. We don't want those who are blinded to the percentages.

"People who overexpect are born losers."

While one can't really beat the system, Olshan said there is a way to up the odds when betting.

"We try to educate people to the realities of the business," he said. "The difference between an educated guess and pure luck is only about 5 to 10 per cent. We disappoint people who might expect more."

Olshan said the favorite betting sport is professional football, followed by baseball.

The first thing taken into consideration when handicapping sports for betting purposes is the ability of the team, he said. Second is coaching, and third is motiviation or the spirit of the team.

Motivation is very important today because of a more businesslike attitude from most players, he said.

"Sports is a microcosm of our society. There is a greater inconsistency today in sports."

The sports oddsmaker will try to arrive at a point spread that will evenly divide the betting public. Since a bookmaker works on a commission, he explained, he tries to even up the teams by giving one a handicap, as in golf, thus hopefully equalizing the betting.

"The oddsmakers try to get a point spread so that 50 per cent of the betting public will bet on each side."

Knowing how impressed the public is with a certain team also determines the point spread.

"Reading the book will give you certain insights, certain disciplines" into betting, Olshan said, noting that there is never a guarantee of winning.

"There is always the unpredictable factor in any game. One should never go overboard on any ball game."

Olshan said most forecasters do not place bets, basically because betting is illegal but handicap forecasting is not. Also, "it could be a conflict of interest. Were it to get out that we supported a particular team, we could affect the price of the game, the odds of the game."

Wayne Drops Tourney Game

Chicago (AP) — Paced by the 28 points of Bruce Cowman, Elmhurst College of Illinois rallied for a 77-74 victory over Wayne State College here Thursday. The victory came in first-round action of the Lakeshore Classic basketball tournament.

In another development, a video tape deck valued at $2,000 was stolen from the Wayne State team when it arrived in Chicago.

Coach Jim Seward said the tape deck was placed on a luggage rack when the team checked in at the Pick Congress Hotel, but it never reached the room. Nothing else was stolen, he said.

Gov. Byrne's 'Bad Faith' Hurts Freedom—Carter

CLINTON, N.J. (AP) — Former boxer Rubin "Hurricane" Carter accused Gov. Brendan T. Byrne on Thursday of participating in a conspiracy to frame him for involvement in a triple murder.

Carter, 38, said Assemblyman Eldridge Hawkins' report to Byrne on the case was equivalent to a frameup and said the legislator's impartiality in the case "never existed."

Byrne had directed Hawkins, a black Essex County attorney, to make an independent inquiry into the case. The governor has received the Hawkins report, which he said he would use in deciding on a limited clemency petition, but has not acted yet.

Carter and a codefendant, John Artis, both black and serving life sentences for the convictions, have claimed they were framed in 1966 because of the former boxer's civil rights activities at the time.

"Hawkins' impartiality never existed in this," Carter said. "He had a theory. Him and his boss (Byrne) had a theory of how they can best get rid of this thing by making us talf guilty and then went out there to manufacture evidence to fit that theory—the very same thing the police did in 1966 that put us here."

In a 1½-hour interview with The Associated Press at a state correctional institution here, the former middleweight boxer said he filed a petition for clemency and allowed state parole board officials to interview him because "I thought this man (Byrne) was going to do right.

"Then when I turn around he had his Hawkins out there all the while trying to reframe me," Carter said.

The Hawkine report has not been made public. Carter says it contends two other men were the triggermen in the triple murders at the Lafayette Bar & Grill in Paterson in 1966 and that Carter and Artis were outside the tavern at the time.

"He now claims to have done in two months what everyone else couldn't do in nine years," he said of Hawkins. Carter said he was never closer than 14 city blocks to the bar on the murder night.

Carter said Hawkins granted a new witness—one that supports the report—immunity in the case.

"Who gave him the power to grant anyone immunity? What senate confirmed him as a prosecutor? If nobody gave this man powers, then clearly he broke some laws," Carter said. "He needs to be in jail."

Of Byrne, Carter said: "I don't expect Byrne to do nothing. I don't expect any of these people who had anything to do with this to have a sense of rightness after nine years. He's a politician talking from three or four sides."

Of Byrne's lack of action on a petition for clemency that would allow Carter and Artis to go free pending the new trial appeal, the former boxer said, "The man has had a solid 13 months that this thing was within his power to do something and he has not done nothing in 13 months."

AP

RUBIN CARTER . . . Discusses trial

Carter said there is nothing to indicate that "he's going to do something in the next five or six days."

According to Carter, who called Hawkins "a supercop who is worried about covering his butt," the assemblyman never spoke to him during his study of the case. Carter said Hawkins' report is "promoting Byrne's program. This was deliberate." He said the report was "nothing but subterfuge."

When told of Carter's remarks, Hawkins said, "I really can't comment on all that stuff. I don't think it is worthy of a comment."

Carter noted that an appeal for a new trial is scheduled to be heard by the State Supreme Court on Jan. 12. "That is another reason why Governor Byrne will say 'Well, I deny him clemency because the state Supreme Court is going to listen to this Jan. 12,' which means that there decision won't be handed down until next summer some time."

Despite the pessimism, Carter maintained he would eventually win his battle for freedom. "I'm gonna win. I don't know how to do it any other way. I have lost many decisions in my life as a prize fighter but I ain't lost too many fights."

"I'm not gonna be defeated now. I'm gonna win. You better believe it," he said.

Penrose Attracts Blue-Gray Scouts

Montgomery, Ala. (AP) — The Blue-Gray football game, which kicks off for its 38th year Friday night, has been struggling for attention amid the hefty roster of post-season college games in recent years. But it's drawing a few more professional eyes this time.

Walton Endures Injuries

Portland, Ore. (AP) — "For a while I was a mess," said Bill Walton, injury-plagued center for the Portland Trail Blazers of the National Basketball Association.

Since joining the Blazers as their No. 1 draft choice in 1974, Walton has endured knee surgery, a sprained finger, a lingering bone spur on his ankle, strep throat, a sprained ankle, a broken toe, bruised cheek, cut eye and subsequent car accident and ankle sprain.

"You can't let the frustrations get you down," he said. "If I didn't like playing basketball so much, I probably wouldn't have this attitude. But what I want to do most right now is play basketball."

He hasn't played for several days and is doubtful for Saturday's home game against New Orleans. The Golden State Warriors visit Portland Sunday.

"I really felt well for the first time in Chicago last week," the 6-foot-11 Walton said. "I was getting in shape again, my ankle was still weak, but it was feeling good.

"Then I went up in the air, and the next thing I knew I landed on my wrist."

More Sports, Page 32

especially when you are in a lot of agony. Mostly you want tomorrow to hurry up and get here."

With both hands disabled, Walton had trouble eating, bathing and dressing.

"You keep hoping every injury will be the last one," Walton said Wednesday, fingering putty in his right hand, still waiting for the swelling to subside in his injured fingers.

The All-American from UCLA says he is injured so often because he is active in the game.

"In my first two years at high school in San Diego, I broke an ankle, broke a leg, had knee surgery and broke four or five bones in my foot all at different times," Walton said "I was just real active."

No accidents occurred for the next six years until he suffered a back injury against Washington State during his senior year with the Bruins' legendary championship team.

"You have ups and downs in basketball," said Walton. "You can't get over-confident when you are up. You have to keep things in perspective.

"The same is true when you are down. You can't lose your perspective. You have to minimize your frustration."

After so many setbacks, how?

"Well, I have to admit I'm running out of techniques," he said, laughing. "But maybe there won't be any more."

Walton, who added more than 30 pounds to his lanky frame last summer with a combination of strenuous workouts and huge vegetarian meals, weighed in at 255 pounds at the start of this season.

"I spent the summer playing basketball, volleyball, weightlifting, swimming, running, riding my bicycle, getting ready," he said. "For a lot of people it would have been work, but it was fun for me."

Walton said he believes in "feeling I always must give my best in athletics. I'm always looking for a way to improve my game."

Much of that looking in the last 18 months has been from the bench.

"I'm not used to sitting on the bench," Walton said. "I see things I think I could helpthe Blazers with, but you have to remember one man doesn't make a team."

Handicapper Makes Odds Favor Gambler

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Gambling is a risk, but sports handicapper Mort Olshan says he can put the odds in your favor.

Olshan has edited the Gold Sheet, a sports forecasting paper, for 19 years and has recently published a book, "Winning Theories of Sports Handicapping."

"I think despite what psychiatrists say, there are two main reasons people gamble," he said. "There's the inexplicable excitement. It gives you, in compacted form, a tremendous high, a tremendous escape from the despair, the problems you have.

"It is a strong enough pull that you can leave your problems behind. It's also an intellectual excercise."

He said a lot of people knock gambling and say money shouldn't be wasted that way, but Olshan compared the gambler to the person who spends $25 a day on golf.

"Obviously there are sick people who are compulsive gamblers," he admitted. "They want to win so desperately they are blinded to the realities. Anyone who calls us (Gold Sheet) and is disatisified, we give them their money back. We don't want those who are blinded to the percentages.

"People who overexpect are born losers."

While one can't really beat the system, Olshan said there is a way to up the odds when betting.

"We try to educate people to the realities of the business," he said. "The difference between an educated guess and pure luck is only about 5 to 10 per cent. We disappoint people who might expect more."

Olshan said the favorite betting sport is professional football, followed by baseball.

The first thing taken into consideration when handicapping sports for betting purposes is the ability of the team, he said. Second is coaching, and third is motiviation or the spirit of the team.

Motivation is very important today because of a more businesslike attitude from most players, he said.

"Sports is a microcosm of our society. There is a greater inconsistency today in sports."

The sports oddsmaker will try to arrive at a point spread that will evenly divide the betting public. Since a bookmaker works on a commission, he explained, he tries to even up the teams by giving one a handicap, as in golf, thus hopefully equalizing the betting.

"The oddsmakers try to get a point spread so that 50 per cent of the betting public will bet on each side."

Knowing how impressed the public is with a certain team also determines the point spread.

"Reading the book will give you certain insights, certain disciplines" into betting, Olshan said, noting that there is never a guarantee of winning.

"There is always the unpredictable factor in any game. One should never go overboard on any ball game."

Olshan said most forecasters do not place bets, basically because betting is illegal but handicap forecasting is not. Also, "it could be a conflict of interest. Were it to get out that we supported a particular team, we could affect the price of the game, the odds of the game."

Wayne Drops Tourney Game

Chicago (AP) — Paced by the 28 points of Bruce Cowman, Elmhurst College of Illinois rallied for a 77-74 victory over Wayne State College here Thursday. The victory came in first-round action of the Lakeshore Classic basketball tournament.

In another development, a video tape deck valued at $2,000 was stolen from the Wayne State team when it arrived in Chicago.

Coach Jim Seward said the tape deck was placed on a luggage rack when the team checked in at the Pick Congress Hotel, but it never reached the room. Nothing else was stolen, he said.

Gov. Byrne's 'Bad Faith' Hurts Freedom—Carter

CLINTON, N.J. (AP) — Former boxer Rubin "Hurricane" Carter accused Gov. Brendan T. Byrne on Thursday of participating in a conspiracy to frame him for involvement in a triple murder.

Carter, 38, said Assemblyman Eldridge Hawkins' report to Byrne on the case was equivalent to a frameup and said the legislator's impartiality in the case "never existed."

Byrne had directed Hawkins, a black Essex County attorney, to make an independent inquiry into the case. The governor has received the Hawkins report, which he said he would use in deciding on a limited clemency petition, but has not acted yet.

Carter and a codefendant, John Artis, both black and serving life sentences for the convictions, have claimed they were framed in 1966 because of the former boxer's civil rights activities at the time.

"Hawkins' impartiality never existed in this," Carter said. "He had a theory. Him and his boss (Byrne) had a theory of how they can best get rid of this thing by making us talf guilty and then went out there to manufacture evidence to fit that theory—the very same thing the police did in 1966 that put us here."

In a 1½-hour interview with The Associated Press at a state correctional institution here, the former middleweight boxer said he filed a petition for clemency and allowed state parole board officials to interview him because "I thought this man (Byrne) was going to do right.

"Then when I turn around he had his Hawkins out there all the while trying to reframe me," Carter said.

The Hawkine report has not been made public. Carter says it contends two other men were the triggermen in the triple murders at the Lafayette Bar & Grill in Paterson in 1966 and that Carter and Artis were outside the tavern at the time.

"He now claims to have done in two months what everyone else couldn't do in nine years," he said of Hawkins. Carter said he was never closer than 14 city blocks to the bar on the murder night.

Carter said Hawkins granted a new witness—one that supports the report—immunity in the case.

"Who gave him the power to grant anyone immunity? What senate confirmed him as a prosecutor? If nobody gave this man powers, then clearly he broke some laws," Carter said. "He needs to be in jail."

Of Byrne, Carter said: "I don't expect Byrne to do nothing. I don't expect any of these people who had anything to do with this to have a sense of rightness after nine years. He's a politician talking from three or four sides."

Of Byrne's lack of action on a petition for clemency that would allow Carter and Artis to go free pending the new trial appeal, the former boxer said, "The man has had a solid 13 months that this thing was within his power to do something and he has not done nothing in 13 months."

AP

RUBIN CARTER . . . Discusses trial

Carter said there is nothing to indicate that "he's going to do something in the next five or six days."

According to Carter, who called Hawkins "a supercop who is worried about covering his butt," the assemblyman never spoke to him during his study of the case. Carter said Hawkins' report is "promoting Byrne's program. This was deliberate." He said the report was "nothing but subterfuge."

When told of Carter's remarks, Hawkins said, "I really can't comment on all that stuff. I don't think it is worthy of a comment."

Carter noted that an appeal for a new trial is scheduled to be heard by the State Supreme Court on Jan 12 "That is another reason why Governor Byrne will say 'Well, I deny him clemency because the state Supreme Court is going to listen to this Jan. 12,' which means that there decision won't be handed down until next summer some time."

Despite the pessimism, Carter maintained he would eventually win his battle for freedom. "I'm gonna win. I don't know how to do it any other way. I have lost many decisions in my life as a prize fighter but I ain't lost too many fights."

"I'm not gonna be defeated now. I'm gonna win. You better believe it," he said.

Penrose Attracts Blue-Gray Scouts

Montgomery, Ala. (AP) — The Blue-Gray football game, which kicks off for its 38th year Friday night, has been struggling for attention amid the hefty roster of post-season college games in recent years. But it's drawing a few more professional eyes this time.

Myers completed 190 of 353 passes for 2,501 yards and 21 touchdowns this season. North Coach Jack Christiansen of Stanford says he may alternate Penrose and Myers on a 50-50 basis.

The South, meanwile, will be quarterbacked by Scott Gardner of Virginia. He set a school record of 6,059 yards in career total offense, but he complains that "statistically, 1975 was my worst season. I didn't really play up to my capabilities."

"That's why I'm really pleased to be here. I'll get a chance to redeem myself," said Gardner.

While the North and South passing attacks promise to be the domunating factor in the game, running back Tony Galbreath of Missouri adds punch to the Blue offense. The 227-pound Galbreath picked up 770 yards and scored 10 touchdowns this year.

South Coach Grant Teaff of Baylor has beefed up the Gray squad with four of his Baylor players. Among them is kicker Bubba Hicks, who booted one 60-yarder this season.

'Miracle' Colts Favored

United Press International

Completion—and by a 16-point margin—is expected to come Sunday when the Colts are home to take on the New England Patriots, a 3-10 disappointment which has not won a game in six weeks.

The Colts shocked the Miami Dolphins in overtime last Sunday 10-7 to guarantee themselves a berth in the American Football Conference playoffs, pending, of course, a victory over the Patriots Sunday or a loss by the Dolphins at the hands of the Denver Broncos Saturday in their finale.

If Baltimore and Miami both win and the Cincinnati Bengals lose, then the Dolphins will gain the wild-card berth which had all but been awarded the Bengals two weeks ago. But Cincinnati lost to Pittsburgh last week to drop its record to 10-3 and finds itself in a must win situation this Sunday against the 2-11 San Diego Chargers.

Over in the National Football Conference, all the playoff berths are spoken for, but three teams are still jockeying for the home field advantage awarded the teams with the two best records for the first round of the playoffs.

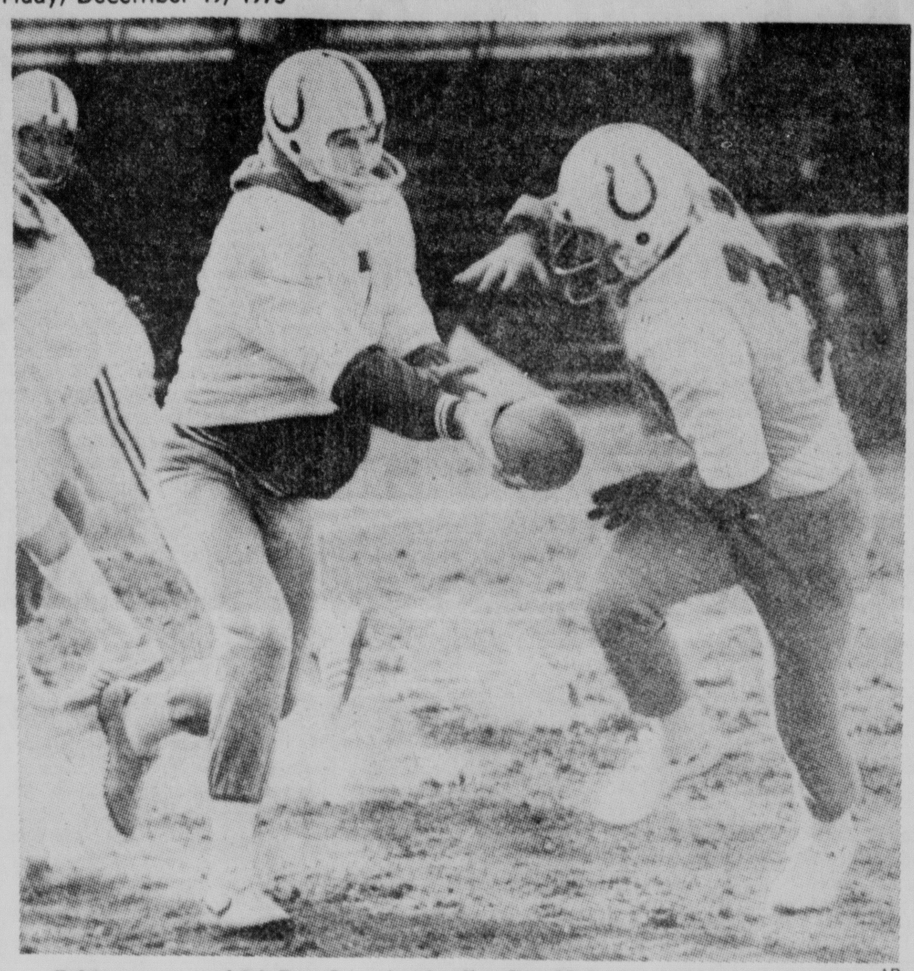
Minnesota was upset by Detroit last week to throw the playoff home field manuevering into a jumble. The loss left Minnesota tied with Los Angeles for the best record in the NFC at 11-2 and both clubs have more than challenging assignments this weekend.

The Vikings must travel to Buffalo Saturday to take on the Bills and O.J. Simpson while the Rams are at home that night to take on the defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers.

Simpson needs 240 yards rushing to reach the 2,000 yard plateau for the second time in three seasons. But don't count the Juice out—he rushed for 200 yards against the New York Jets on the final day of the 1973 season to get the first 2,000 yard rushing season in NFL history.

In another game of importance, St. Louis wades into Pontiac Stadium to take on the giant-killer Detroit Lions with Terry Metcalf, who sat out last week's victory over Chicago, needing 110 yards in total offense to set a new NFL record.

Elsewhere, Kansas City visits Oakland, Dallas takes on the New York Jets, Cleveland meets Houston, Philadelphia journeys to Washington, Atlanta is at Green Bay, Chicago travels to New Orleans and the New York Giants close out at San Francisco.



Baltimore quarterback Bert Jones hands off to Don McCauley during team practice. AP

Jones' Injury Disclosed

Although Jones was first hurt on Nov. 9, X rays didn't show the seriousness of the injury until four weeks later. And that was disclosed Thursday.

"Bert's ribs were cracked in two or three places," said Mike O'Shea, assistant trainer for the National Football club. "But they are not cracked now."

X rays taken after Jone was hurt in a 42-35 victory over the Buffalo Bills appeared negative. But later ones showed thin linee of calcium, which indicated there had been hairline cracks in the ribs.

"Sometimes hairline cracks don't show up on X rays," O'Shea said. "They show up weeks later when the calcium builds up during the healing process."

Baltimore's victory over Buffalo, after overcoming a 2-0 deficit, evened the team's record at 4-4. Coach Ted Marchibroda has called it the pivotal game in helping the Colts come of age following last year's 2-12 record and a 1-4 start.

Last Sunday, tte Colts again came from behind to beat the Miami Dolphins 10-7 in overtime. They take a 9-4 mark into Sunday's home game against the New England Patriots. A victory would wrap up the title in the American Conference East.

"He's had games where he's thrown for more yardage and completed tougher passes," Marchibroda said. "But the Miami game was by far the best he's had from a standpoint of play-calling, even though his play-calling has been excellent all season."

When Jones directed the tying touchdown drive of 86 yards and another lengthy march for the winning field goal against the Dolphins, Marchibroda said, "he went against all his natural instincts.

"It's Bert's style to go for the big play, to try to bomb the opposition," Marchibroda said. "But he knew exactly what he had to do to beat Miami, and he did it. He picked them apart with good plays—four yards here, five there, never doing anything that could kill the drive. It was a masterpiece of work, both times."

During his first two years with the Colts, Jones missed valuable training time because of the College All-Star game and the players' strike.

"His first two years weren't good years," said Marchibroda, a rookie head coach this season. "You could say in some ways he just started off this year."

In two previous seasons, Jones completed 186 passes for 2,149 yards, 12 touchdowns and was intercepted 24 times. This year, he's completed 185 passes dor 2,302 yards and 17 touchdowns and hae been intercepted only seven times. He hasn't been intercepted in his last four games. Over that span, he's completed 56 of 88 passes.

While Jones has worn protective pads during games and was in pain again last Sunday, Marchibroda reported the young quarterback "feels better this week than he did last week."

Tanner New Oakland Manager

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chuck Tanner, eased out as manager of Bill Veeck's Chicago White Sox Wednesday, wound up Thursday with another baseball live wire as manager of Charles O. Finley's Oakland Athletics.

The deal was sealed in Chicago, Finley's business headquarters and where Veeck, the new Sox owner, announced 24 hours earlier he was putting an old friend and cohort, 67-year-old Paul Richards, in the place of the 46-year-old Tanner.

Finley, who fired manager Alvin Dark earlier this year, broke precedent and signed Tanner to a three-year contract, reportedly for the same $70,000-a-year the old Miwaukee Brave and Chicago Cub had been getting from the Sox.

Tanner still had three years to go on his Sox contract and Finley chortled, "If I signed him for $10,000 a year, Veeck would have to make up the difference. So I've outvexed Veeck. That's comedy, bud."

It was a case of coming up roses, at least financially, for Tanner, who could do no better than bring his team in fifth behind the champion A's in the western division of the American League last season.

It was apparent even at the Hollywood, Fla., meeting that Tanner and Finley were in some kind of cahoots. They were seen together often after the Veeck deal went through and they got together again for dinner Wednesday night and sealed the deal.

"He offered me a three-year contract and I agreed," Tanner said Thursday.

The two were hard at work on the telephones Thursday in the living room of Finley's apartment.

Tanner said into one telephone, "Well, he showed a lot of confidence in me, he gave me a three-year contract." Across the room, Finley said loudly, "That's the only way I could get him."

It was the first time Finley has even given a manager a three-year commitment. In his stormy career he has been noted for getting rid of managers after one year.

Tanner could have stayed on with the Sox as a scout and developer of new talent, but said that was not what he wanted.

"I want to manage," he said. "That's my job. I couldn't sit out in an office when I have a chance to sit on the bench."

Veeck said, "I'm disappointed, obviously," and implied he had wanted to keep Tanner around as an "insurance policy" in case Richards ran into trouble.

"I had certainly made a legitimate pitch to try and get him to stay with our organization," Veeck said. "I think that Charley Finley has signed an excellent manager.

Chuck Tanner

"I'm not surprised. Chuck wanted to manage and I think he felt the year or two of waiting around would not keep his talents as sharp as they used to be.

"We'd like to have Chuck back with us some time, obviously, and maybe about the time—Charley does have a track record of getting disenchanted with his managers every year or two and maybe when he does it will be just about the right time for us."

Of Richards, Veeck said, "I'm not implying anything. But one looks at 67 years of age and you don't really look at the longevity as being as great as 39.

'Miracle' Colts Favored

United Press International

Completion—and by a 16-point margin—is expected to come Sunday when the Colts are home to take on the New England Patriots, a 3-10 disappointment which has not won a game in six weeks.

The Colts shocked the Miami Dolphins in overtime last Sunday 10-7 to guarantee themselves a berth in the American Football Conference playoffs, pending, of course, a victory over the Patriots Sunday or a loss by the Dolphins at the hands of the Denver Broncos Saturday in their finale.

If Baltimore and Miami both win and the Cincinnati Bengals lose, then the Dolphins will gain the wild-card berth which had all but been awarded the Bengals two weeks ago. But Cincinnati lost to Pittsburgh last week to drop its record to 10-3 and, finds itself in a must win situation this Sunday against the 2-11 San Diego Chargers.

Over in the National Football Conference, all the playoff berths are spoken for, but three teams are still jockeying for the home field advantage awarded the teams with the two best records for the first round of the playoffs.

Minnesota was upset by Detroit last week to throw the playoff home field manuevering into a jumble. The loss left Minnesota tied with Los Angeles for the best record in the NFC at 11-2 and both clubs have more than challenging assignments this weekend.

The Vikings must travel to Buffalo Saturday to take on the Bills and O.J. Simpson while the Rams are at home that night to take on the defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers.

Simpson needs 240 yards rushing to reach the 2,000 yard plateau for the second time in three seasons. But don't count the Juice out—he rushed for 200 yards against the New York Jets on the final day of the 1973 season to get the first 2,000 yard rushing season in NFL history.

In another game of importance, St. Louis wades into Pontiac Stadium to take on the giant-killer Detroit Lions with Terry Metcalf, who sat out last week's victory over Chicago, needing 110 yards in total offense to set a new NFL record.

Elsewhere, Kansas City visits Oakland, Dallas takes on the New York Jets, Cleveland meets Houston, Philadelphia journeys to Washington, Atlanta is at Green Bay, Chicago travels to New Orleans and the New York Giants close out at San Francisco.

Jones' Injury Disclosed

Although Jones was first hurt on Nov. 9, X rays didn't show the seriousness of the injury until four weeks later. And that was disclosed Thursday.

"Bert's ribs were cracked in two or three places," said Mike O'Shea, assistant trainer for the National Football club. "But they are not cracked now."

X rays taken after Jone was hurt in a 42-35 victory over the Buffalo Bills appeared negative. But later ones showed thin lunee of calcium, which indicated there had been hairline cracks in the ribs.

"Sometimes hairline cracks don't show up on X rays," O'Shea said. "They show up weeks later when the calcium builds up during the healing process."

Baltimore's victory over Buffalo, after overcoming a 2-0 deficit, evened the team's record at 4-4. Coach Ted Marchibroda has called it the pivotal game in helping the Colts come of age following last year's 2-12 record and a 1-4 start.

Last Sunday, tte Colts again came from behind to beat the Miami Dolphins 10-7 in overtime. They take a 9-4 mark into Sunday's home game against the New England Patriots. A victory would wrap up the title in the American Conference East.

"He's had games where he's thrown for more yardage and completed tougher passes," Marchibroda said. "But the Miami game was by far the best he's had from a standpoint of play-calling, even though his play-calling has been excellent all season."

When Jones directed the tying touchdown drive of 86 yards and another lengthy march for the winning field goal against the Dolphins, Marchibroda said, "he went against all his natural instincts.

"It's Bert's style to go for the big play, to try to bomb the opposition," Marchibroda said. "But he knew exactly what he had to do to beat Miami, and he did it. He picked them apart with good plays—four yards here, five there, never doing anything that could kill the drive. It was a masterpiece of work, both times."

During his first two years with the Colts, Jones missed valuable training time because of the College All-Star game and the players' strike.

"His first two years weren't good years," said Marchibroda, a rookie head coach this season. "You could say in some ways he just started off this year."

In two previous seasons, Jones completed 186 passes for 2,149 yards, 12 touchdowns and was intercepted 24 times. This year, he's completed 185 passes dor 2,302 yards and 17 touchdowns and hae been intercepted only seven times. He hasn't been intercepted in his last four games Over that span, he's completed 56 of 88 passes.

While Jones has worn protective pads during games and was in pain again last Sunday, Marchibroda reported the young quarterback "feels better this week than he did last week."

Poll: Humphrey Ahead Of Ford and Reagan

By LOUIS HARRIS

If they had to choose a President now, the American people would elect Democratic Sen. Hubert Humphrey over Gerald Ford by a 52-41% margin. If Ronald Reagan were the Republican candidate, he would also lose to Humphrey, but by a smaller margin of 50-43%.

These results emerge from an in-person survey of 1,214 likely voters conducted only three weeks ago. They suggest that, despite all the furor over whether or not President Ford can defeat Reagan for the Republican nomination, it is entirely possible that neither man can be elected on the GOP ticket in 1976.

The weak showing of Ford is another sign that he has slipped precipitously in his standing with the American people. Last April he had a 47-46% lead over Humphrey. By September, this had grown to a substantial 48-42% lead. Clearly, his losses among the entire electorate have been monumental. In two months he has turned a six-point lead into an 11-point deficit, a swing of 17 points. While it is possible for the President to come back from this calamitous situation, the burden clearly rests with him to prove his viability as a political candidate.

Louis Harris

Shift Drastic

This fall in the fortunes of Ford may be the main reason why Reagan has gained in popularity, and it may lead the GOP to conclude that Reagan will make the stronger candidate in 1976. But it is important to point out that only a few months ago, Reagan was paired against Sen. Edward Kennedy in a race for the presidency, and he lost by precisely the same margin, 50-43%, by which he now loses to Humphrey. This indicates that Reagan has not picked up a great deal of strength, but rather that Ford has slipped and the California governor is obviously benefiting from it.

As for Humphrey, these latest results will undoubtedly increase speculation that he will be his party's nominee at its New York national convention next July. He has said that he would be available, although he does not plan to run in any of the primaries and is not a declared candidate.

However, there is a great deal about Humphrey's own viability as a potential nominee that must also be explored. There is potential for trouble in questions about his health and about the conviction of his last national campaign manager for taking illegal contributions. He also has to worry about two old adversaries who might run on independent tickets against him: George Wallace, one of his opponents in 1968, and Eugene McCarthy, his old foe from his home state of Minnesota, who vows he will run as an independent if Humphrey is nominated. Faced with a four-man race, Humphrey might not be as strong a frontrunner as he appears today.

Nonetheless, Humphrey does appear to be much stronger in his own right today than either President Ford or Reagan. This may be because the two potential GOP nominees, as well as the Republican Party itself, are weak, rather than because Hubert Humphrey as a potential Democratic nominee is so strong. This poll may just be telling us that the Republican Party will be in deep trouble in 1976, almost no matter whom it finally nominates.

High Court: Highway Relocation Doesn't Create Access Rights

By United Press International

The Nebraska Supreme Court ruled Thursday in a Richardson County case just because a highway is relocated doesn't create farmer and rancher access rights where there was no highway and no access before.

In a Lancaster County case, the high court reaffirmed its earlier stands that municipalities may adopt liquor license control ordinances which are more stringent than State Liquor Control Commission rules.

The two cases were among seven handed down Thursday.

In the Richardson County case, the Supreme Court ordered a new trial and reversed a decision by a jury that Kenneth Moorehead should receive $49,750 for 7.5 acres of land adjacent to a segment of U.S. Highway 83 which was used to relocate the highway.

The county court originally fixed damages at $31,450 and Moorehead, whose land is near Falls City, appealed to the district court where a jury decided upon the higher figure. The State Roads Department appealed because the jury decision was based upon loss of access.

The Supreme Court singled out an instruction which allowed the jury to figure damages for loss of access as grounds for the new trial saying "the plaintiff's contention that a landowner has a right of access to a particular highway, even when relocated, is without merit."

Moorehead may well have had greater access to the highway at its old location, the court said. But the rerouting "of highways has nothing to do with the rights of access," particularly when that relocated highway was designed as a limited access route.

Therefore, the court said, there was no right actually lost and the damage figure may well be too high.

In the Lancaster County case, the State Liquor Control Commission upheld a decision by the city of Lincoln to revoke a liquor license held by Bali Hai Inc. for failure to open its doors.

In the case, the City Council invoked an ordinance which says if a firm has a license but for some reason doesn't open its doors and use the license for more than 10 days, then it can be revoked.

The firm appealed saying the city preempted Liquor Commission authority. The Supreme Court disagreed saying state liquor laws were silent on the issue of revoking for non-use.

"The action of the Lincoln City Council in enacting (the ordinance) was clearly within its local regulatory powers that have not been preempted by a state statute or valid regulatory order of the Nebraska Liquor Control Commission," the high court said. "The contention of (Bali Hai) is without merit."

In other cases the Supreme Court:

Enrollment Up In Extension High School

Enrollments in the University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension division high school for the first four months of this fiscal year are up nearly 20% over a year ago, the university reported Thursday.

Monty McMahon, director of independent study, said between July 1 and the end of October 5, 708 enrollments were received.

That was an increase of 917 over the same period of 1974. During the 1974-75 fiscal year, over 11,900 high school enrollments were recorded.

The extension division high school is the only independent study by correspondence program in the United States through which students may earn a high school diploma fully accredited by a State Education Department, the university said.

Poll: Humphrey Ahead Of Ford and Reagan

By LOUIS HARRIS

If they had to choose a President now, the American people would elect Democratic Sen. Hubert Humphrey over Gerald Ford by a 52-41% margin. If Ronald Reagan were the Republican candidate, he would also lose to Humphrey, but by a smaller margin of 50-43%.

These results emerge from an in-person survey of 1,214 likely voters conducted only three weeks ago. They suggest that, despite all the furor over whether or not President Ford can defeat Reagan for the Republican nomination, it is entirely possible that neither man can be elected on the GOP ticket in 1976.

The weak showing of Ford is another sign that he has slipped precipitously in his standing with the American people. Last April he had a 47-46% lead over Humphrey. By September, this had grown to a substantial 48-42% lead. Clearly, his losses among the entire electorate have been monumental. In two months he has turned a six-point lead into an 11-point deficit, a swing of 17 points. While it is possible for the President to come back from this calamitous situation, the burden clearly rests with him to prove his viability as a political candidate.

Louis Harris

Shift Drastic

This fall in the fortunes of Ford may be the main reason why Reagan has gained in popularity, and it may lead the GOP to conclude that Reagan will make the stronger candidate in 1976. But it is important to point out that only a few months ago, Reagan was paired against Sen. Edward Kennedy in a race for the presidency, and he lost by precisely the same margin, 50-43%, by which he now loses to Humphrey. This indicates that Reagan has not picked up a great deal of strength, but rather that Ford has slipped and the California governor is obviously benefiting from it.

As for Humphrey, these latest results will undoubtedly increase speculation that he will be his party's nominee at its New York national convention next July. He has said that he would be available, although he does not plan to run in any of the primaries and is not a declared candidate.

However, there is a great deal about Humphrey's own viability as a potential nominee that must also be explored. There is potential for trouble in questions about his health and about the conviction of his last national campaign manager for taking illegal contributions. He also has to worry about two old adversaries who might run on independent tickets against him. George Wallace, one of his opponents in 1968, and Eugene McCarthy, his old foe from his home state of Minnesota, who vows he will run as an independent if Humphrey is nominated. Faced with a four-man race, Humphrey might not be as strong a frontrunner as he appears today.

Nonetheless, Humphrey does appear to be much stronger in his own right today than either President Ford or Reagan. This may be because the two potential GOP nominees, as well as the Republican Party itself, are weak, rather than because Hubert Humphrey as a potential Democratic nominee is so strong. This poll may just be telling us that the Republican Party will be in deep trouble in 1976, almost no matter whom it finally nominates.

High Court: Highway Relocation Doesn't Create Access Rights

By United Press International

The Nebraska Supreme Court ruled Thursday in a Richardson County case just because a highway is relocated doesn't create farmer and rancher access rights where there was no highway and no access before.

In a Lancaster County case, the high court reaffirmed its earlier stands that municipalities may adopt liquor license control ordinances which are more stringent than State Liquor Control Commission rules.

The two cases were among seven handed down Thursday.

In the Richardson County case, the Supreme Court ordered a new trial and reversed a decision by a jury that Kenneth Moorehead should receive $49,750 for 7 5 acres of land adjacent to a segment of U.S. Highway 83 which was used to relocate the highway.

The county court originally fixed damages at $31,450 and Moorehead, whose land is near Falls City, appealed to the district court where a jury decided upon the higher figure. The State Roads Department appealed because the jury decision was based upon loss of access.

The Supreme Court singled out an instruction which allowed the jury to figure damages for loss of access as grounds for the new trial saying "the plaintiff's contention that a landowner has a right of access to a particular highway, even when relocated, is without merit."

Moorehead may well have had greater access to the highway at its old location, the court said. But the rerouting "of highways has nothing to do with the rights of access," particularly when that relocated highway was designed as a limited access route.

Therefore, the court said, there was no right actually lost and the damage figure may well be too high.

In the Lancaster County case, the State Liquor Control Commission upheld a decision by the city of Lincoln to revoke a liquor license held by Bali Hai Inc. for failure to open its doors.

In the case, the City Council invoked an ordinance which says if a firm has a license but for some reason doesn't open its doors and use the license for more than 10 days, then it can be revoked.

The firm appealed saying the city preempted Liquor Commission authority. The Supreme Court disagreed saying state liquor laws were silent on the issue of revoking for non-use.

"The action of the Lincoln City Council in enacting (the ordinance) was clearly within its local regulatory powers that have not been preempted by a state statute or valid regulatory order of the Nebraska Liquor Control Commission," the high court said. "The contention of (Bali Hai) is without merit."

In other cases the Supreme Court:

—Agreed with the decision of the Sarpy County District Court to hold in contempt Ray Havelone for violating an injunction prohibiting him from moving any more homes into an area within the zoning jurisdiction of the village of Springfield.

—Affirmed the decision of the Douglas County District Court to dismiss a suit filed by Thomas Shotoski seeking damages from Standard Chemical Manufacturing Co. for loss of milk production.

—Agreed with the Lancaster County District Court's decision to accept registration of a divorce decree issued to Betty and Lyle Tiedeman by an Oklahoma court.

—Affirmed the terms of a divorce decree issued by the Custer County District Court to Bertha and LeRoy Olson.

—Affirmed the decision of the Saunders County District court to quit title to a tract of 80 acres of land in a suit brought by Thomas Lowry against John Murren.

Thieves Checking Newspaper Items

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Thieves like to strike when no one is home. And simply by checking the newspapers, they can find out when houses are likely to be empty.

The information is given by the families themselves — in the obituary columns or in the announcements of wedding plans. All a thief has to do is check the time a funeral or wedding service is being held and use that hour to go through the house. It's even likely that most of the neighbors will be right there with you, cutting down on the number of possible witnesses.

On wedding days, a thief hopes to recap a harvest of wedding presents as well as the family TV and stereo. But a death usually offers more opportunities. A widow often spends the first few days after her husband dies at the home of one of her children, or a friend. This gives a thief several nights to clean out the house.

What can you do to keep your property safe? Lieutenant William Stevens, of the Scarsdale, N.Y. Police, makes these suggestions:

—For protection during the service, ask a neighbor to stay in the house. Or hire a couple of teenage boys. They should move around the house and look out the window occasionally, so a thief will know the place is occupied. Sneak thieves do not want to be seen, since their pictures may well be on file at the police station. Neither do they want violence. So the best deterrent is simply to have someone in the house.

—In most communities, you can hire a policeman to do guard duty. Each police department has its own rules on this, and sets its own price. In Scarsdale, the going rate is $10 for the first hour and $7.50 for each hour thereafter.

—For longer absences, such as during the week after a death, it becomes prohibitive to hire full-time police protection. If possible, hire a young couple to house-sit, or a couple of students from a local college. Just make sure that one or the other of them can be in the house at all times.

Lights that go on and off at pre-set times, plus regular inspections by neighbors, might help some. So will burglar alarms, as long as the neighbors are close enough to respond. You might also ask the local police to drive by occasionally. But these are small deterrents to the professional thief.

—You can hire the services of a protection agency for much less than a policeman would charge. But in this case, you have to worry about what you're getting for your money. Most protection-agency guards are honest. But since the agencies often pay little more than the minimum wage you usually don't get highly trained personnel. And they may not have the same sense of responsibility about your property as a neighbor would. However, protection agencies try hard to police the quality of their personnel in order to protect their own reputations — and if anything is damaged it should be covered by the agency's insurance.

—If the house is to be emptied and sold after a death, the security problem is of even greater duration. It will take the executor weeks, perhaps months, to get the estate sorted out, and nothing can be moved without his permission. It's smart to arrange for the most valuable things to be removed immediately (and hire a housesitter until that's done).

—Wealthy people have an even greater problem. Because the administration of the estate is more complicated, it may be some time before anything can be moved. This gives a thief (and even the household help) plenty of time to steal.

In this case, the executor (often a bank) will generally hire a guard service and hope for the best.

Because of these risks, you might think twice about how much information you want to put into the newspaper. The date and time of a wedding may not be necessary, since the guests will all have invitations. For a funeral, the address of the funeral home may be enough.

Direct Cattle Sales

Volume: 5,100; demand fairly good, movement best in more than a week, but sellers still reluctant to deal at current levels or in beef restrictions. About 20 per cent sold delivered live to packing plants with weighing conditions equal to 3 per cent shrink at feedlots, some with additional 1-2 per cent dockage for mud; the remainder dressed hot weight basis.
Live: difficult to sell on live basis because of dirty hides, and an accurate price trend was not established because of no recent price comparisons; small volume steers, high-good and choice, 1,050-1,175 lb 44.00-45.25; limited volume heifers, high-good and choice, 850-1,000 lb 41.00-43.00.
Dressed: prices mostly 1.00 higher, instances 1.00-1.50 higher on a small showing of uniform choice, 700-900 lb carcasses; weight only—steers, good to mostly choice, 500-800 lb carcasses 71.00-72.50; some evenly divided good-choice 70.00-71.00; small number 600-900 lb carcasses 72.50-73.50; heifers, good to mostly choice, 400-700 lb carcasses 68.00-70.00, outside price mainly on choice, 500-700 lb carcasses.

Thieves Checking Newspaper Items

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — Thieves like to strike when no one is home And simply by checking the newspapers, they can find out when houses are likely to be empty

The information is given by the families themselves — in the obituary columns or in the announcements of wedding plans All a thief has to do is check the time a funeral or wedding service is being held and use that hour to go through the house It s even likely that most of the neighbors will be right there with you, cutting down on the number of possible witnesses

On wedding days, a thief hopes to recap a harvest of wedding presents as well as the family TV and stereo But a death usually offers more opportunities A widow often spends the first few days after her husband dies at the home of one of her children, or a friend This gives a thief several nights to clean out the house

What can you do to keep your property safe? Lieutenant William Stevens, of the Scarsdale N Y Police, makes these suggestions

—For protection during the service, ask a neighbor to stay in the house Or hire a couple of teenage boys They should move around the house and look out the window occasionally, so a thief will know the place is occupied Sneak thieves do not want to be seen, since their pictures may well be on file at the police station Neither do they want violence So the best deterrent is simply to have someone in the house

—In most communities, you can hire a policeman to do guard duty Each police department has its own rules on this, and sets its own price. In Scarsdale, the going rate is $10 for the first hour and $7 50 for each hour thereafter

—For longer absences, such as during the week after a death, it becomes prohibitive to hire full-time police protection If possible, hire a young couple to house-sit, or a couple of students from a local college Just make sure that one or the other of them can be in the house at all times

Lights that go on and off at pre-set times, plus regular inspections by neighbors, might help some So will burglar alarms, as long as the neighbors are close enough to respond You might also ask the local police to drive by occasionally But these are small deterrents to the professional thief

—You can hire the services of a protection agency for much less than a policeman would charge But in this case, you have to worry about what you're getting for your money Most protection agency guards are honest But since the agencies often pay little more than the minimum wage you usually don't get highly trained personnel And they may not have the same sense of responsibility about your property as a neighbor would However, protection agencies try hard to police the quality of their personnel in order to protect their own reputations — and if anything is damaged it should be covered by the agency's insurance

—If the house is to be emptied and sold after a death, the security problem is of even greater duration It will take the executor weeks, perhaps months, to get the estate sorted out, and nothing can be moved without his permission It's smart to arrange for the most valuable things to be removed immediately (and hire a housesitter until that's done)

—Wealthy people have an even greater problem Because the administration of the estate is more complicated, it may be some time before anything can be moved This gives a thief (and even the household help) plenty of time to steal

In this case, the executor (often a bank) will generally hire a guard service and hope for the best

Because of these risks, you might think twice about how much information you want to put into the newspaper The date and time of a wedding may not be necessary, since the guests will all have invitations For a funeral, the address of the funeral home may be enough

Hog Prices Up Sharply

OMAHA, Neb (AP)—Hogs bounced sharply higher on the Omaha livestock market Thursday following several days of downside prices, and the main reason for the upturn was a relatively small run

There were only about 3,000 hogs on offer, and the butcher top got back over the $50 00 mark

There were only about 600 head in the cattle pens Steers and heifers were virtually absent and the bulk of the day's fresh slaughter run was made up of cows, which trended fully steady

Israel Returns Soldiers' Bodies To Egyptians

Tel Aviv, Israel (AP) — Israel returned to Egypt Thursday the bodies of 93 Egyptian soldiers killed in the last two Middle East wars, the military command announced.

A spokesman said all the remains were found recently in different areas of the Sinai desert. Sixteen of the bodies were from the 1967 war, the spokesman said.

An Israeli honor guard stood at attention and an Israeli army chaplain recited prayers as the coffins were returned at the Baluza U.N. checkpoint in the Sinai desert.

Israel Returns Soldiers' Bodies To Egyptians

Tel Aviv, Israel (AP) — Israel returned to Egypt Thursday the bodies of 93 Egyptian soldiers killed in the last two Middle East wars, the military command announced.

A spokesman said all the remains were found recently in different areas of the Sinai desert. Sixteen of the bodies were from the 1967 war, the spokesman said.

A communique said the remains were returned "in accordance with the Egyptians' request."

An Israeli honor guard stood at attention and an Israeli army chaplain recited prayers as the coffins were returned at the Baluza U.N. checkpoint in the Sinai desert.

Man Sues Police In Driveway Dispute

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

"No amount of apologies by the police department or defendants will now repair the damage inflicted."

So claimed a suit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court by Lincolnite Jerry Juncker.

Juncker said the police hauled him into the station after he refused to let a car parked in his driveway get out until the driver apologized for being abusive.

According to the suit, Juncker found the car in his driveway when he came home at 3:30 p.m. on July 23. He said he asked people in the car to move it, but they refused.

So Juncker pulled his car in behind the car, blocking it, according to the suit.

Then a man came out of the next door apartment building and became "loud and abusive" when discovering this state of affairs, the suit claimed. Juncker refused to move the car until the man apologized.

The Man "made certain threats" against Juncker and he called police. When they arrived most of their efforts to resolve the situation were directed at him, Juncker's suit claimed, because the officers were "aware of the prominent family background" of the other man.

When he continued to refuse to move his car, Juncker said, the officers told him he was under arrest on suspicion of larceny of an automobile.

He was frisked and taken to headquarters, where he alleges a Sgt. Ronald Bruder berated him for his behavior. He was held for a half hour and released, the suit said.

When he returned home, the suit claims, he found that officers had rolled his car aside to let the other car out.

Juncker is seeking $50,000 for what the suit contends was an illegal deprivation of his liberty, for causing him distress and anxiety and for humiliating him in front of his neighbors.

Named as defendants were Bruder and Sgt. James Baird.

Girls Allegedly Try To Set Fire To Another Girl

Two girls, aged 13 and 14, have been turned over to juvenile authorities in connection with an incident in which they allegedly tried to set fire to another girl's hair and clothing.

The incident was reported by a 13-year-old girl who said she was standing outside Goodrich Junior High when the two grabbed her and pulled her into a small room near the school gymnasium.

She said they used a cigarette lighter in attempts to set her hair and jacket on fire, as well as burn her hair. She said she was burned slightly on the hands and sustained two bruises from kicks to the shin.

The scuffle apparently stemmed from an incident earlier that day when the victim accidentally dropped a trampoline while it was being disassembled. It fell on a fourth girl's arm. The victim said the two assailants yelled at her about the accident.

Suit Charges Computer Firm Broke Contract

Eldon O. Hutchison has filed the suit against Computer Business Services Marketing, Inc., contending that the firm has violated a 1974 contract.

Under the contract Hutchison was to service, maintain and establish new customer accounts for the firm in the six-county area of Lancaster, York, Buffalo, Hall, Hamilton and Adams Counties, the suit contends.

Hutchison was to receive initial customer lists totaling a $2,500 monthly fee, according to the suit.

Wacker Named NMPP Manager

H. Steve Wacker, utilities manager at Hutchinson, Minn., has been elected general manager of the newly created Nebraska Municipal Power Pool (NMPP).

Wacker has been general manager and assistant general manager of utiliteis at Hutchinson, Minn., (pop. 12,000) since 1970.

NMPP was officially created Dec. 8 by 20 Nebraska municipalities. The organization will provide electrical service to more than 300,000 persons.

M. Salazar Found Guilty In Wood River Robbery

Grand Island (UPI) — A District Court jury of eight men and four women Wednesday found Michael Salazar, 24, guilty of assault and robbery in connection with an Oct. 18 incident at a Wood River service station.

Judge Donald Weaver ordered Salazar held in the county jail until the prosecution determines if any further action will be taken. Salazar had been accused of robbery, assault with intent to do great harm and auto theft.

Salazar was found guilty of robbing and stabbing Bradley Dimmitt, 16, of Wood River. He was apprehended later the same day in Ashland, allegedly after taking off in Dimmitt's car.

Man Sues Police In Driveway Dispute

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

"No amount of apologies by the police department or defendants will now repair the damage inflicted."

So claimed a suit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court by Lincolnite Jerry Juncker.

Juncker said the police hauled him into the station after he refused to let a car parked in his driveway get out until the driver apologized for being abusive.

According to the suit, Juncker found the car in his driveway when he came home at 3:30 p.m. on July 23. He said he asked people in the car to move it, but they refused.

So Juncker pulled his car in behind the car, blocking it, according to the suit.

Then a man came out of the next door apartment building and became "loud and abusive" when discovering this state of affairs, the suit claimed. Juncker refused to move the car until the man apologized.

The Man "made certain threats" against Juncker and he called police. When they arrived most of their efforts to resolve the situation were directed at him, Juncker's suit claimed, because the officers were "aware of the prominent family background" of the other man.

When he continued to refuse to move his car, Juncker said, the officers told him he was under arrest on suspicion of larceny of an automobile.

He was frisked and taken to headquarters, where he alleges a Sgt. Ronald Bruder berated him for his behavior. He was held for a half hour and released, the suit said.

When he returned home, the suit claims, he found that officers had rolled his car aside to let the other car out.

Juncker is seeking $50,000 for what the suit contends was an illegal deprivation of his liberty, for causing him distress and anxiety and for humiliating him in front of his neighbors.

Named as defendants were Bruder and Sgt. James Baird.

Girls Allegedly Try To Set Fire To Another Girl

Two girls, aged 13 and 14, have been turned over to juvenile authorities in connection with an incident in which they allegedly tried to set fire to another girl's hair and clothing.

The incident was reported by a 13-year-old girl who said she was standing outside Goodrich Junior High when the two grabbed her and pulled her into a small room near the school gymnasium.

She said they used a cigarette lighter in attempts to set her hair and jacket on fire, as well as burn her hair. She said she was burned slightly on the hands and sustained two bruises from kicks to the shin.

The scuffle apparently stemmed from an incident earlier that day when the victim accidentally dropped a trampoline while it was being disassembled. It fell on a fourth girl's arm. The victim said the two assailants yelled at her about the accident.

Mail Rates To Rise

Chicago (UPI) — R. Sargent Shriver announced he will enter delegate slates in the Illinois March 16 primary election and also will run in the state's Democratic presidential popularity contest.

Suit Charges Computer Firm Broke Contract

Eldon O. Hutchison has filed the suit against Computer Business Services Marketing, Inc., contending that the firm has violated a 1974 contract.

Under the contract Hutchison was to service, maintain and establish new customer accounts for the firm in the six-county area of Lancaster, York, Buffalo, Hall, Hamilton and Adams Counties, the suit contends.

Hutchison was to receive initial customer lists totaling a $2,500 monthly fee, according to the suit.

Wacker Named NMPP Manager

H. Steve Wacker, utilities manager at Hutchinson, Minn., has been elected general manager of the newly created Nebraska Municipal Power Pool (NMPP).

Wacker, 33, was named to the position during the organizational meeting of the NMPP interim board of directors Wednesday.

Wacker has been general manager and assistant general manager of utiliteis at Hutchinson, Minn., (pop. 12,000) since 1970.

NMPP was officially created Dec. 8 by 20 Nebraska municipalities. The organization will provide electrical service to more than 300,000 persons.

All NMPP members will meet in March to select a permanent board.

Olson was elected president of the interim board. Other officers are Beachler, vice preident; and Wolverton, secretary-treasurer.

M. Salazar Found Guilty In Wood River Robbery

Grand Island (UPI) — A District Court jury of eight men and four women Wednesday found Michael Salazar, 24, guilty of assault and robbery in connection with an Oct. 18 incident at a Wood River service station.

Judge Donald Weaver ordered Salazar held in the county jail until the prosecution determines if any further action will be taken. Salazar had been accused of robbery, assault with intent to do great harm and auto theft.

He represented himself but court records showed he rested his case without presenting any evidence on his behalf.

Salazar was found guilty of robbing and stabbing Bradley Dimmitt, 16, of Wood River. He was apprehended later the same day in Ashland, allegedly after taking off in Dimmitt's car.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Friday, December 19, 1975

Sagittarius can exasperate — the native can lack a sense of humor, can be direct and painfully honest. These are the persons who look beyond the immediate, who enlarge horizons, who fight for principles, who love to travel, who bring together persons of various customs and cultures. Here is the news person, the publisher, author — here, too, we find the linguist, the individual who lives with zest, lust and can go to extremes. Much change, travel and love upcoming for Sagittarius in 1976.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be positive regarding legal rights, permissions. You can transcend the petty — key is to be true to yourself. Means don't play games with those of little faith — or talent. You are about to make a mark — and this is a day when you realize it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on reconciliation with disgruntled relative. Key is to take new steps, to emphasize originality, independence minus arrogance. Leo, Aquarius could be in picture. Hold off on unnecessary trip.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Follow through on project — teach and learn. Accent on money and how it gets the way it is — impulse buying now can be more costly than usual. Aquarian is in picture. You are presented with unusual choice, proposition. You will know what to do!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Excitement occurs at home base. Cycle is high and status quo is shaken. Diversify. Highlight humor, flexibility. Social event is highlighted. Display sense of humor, willingness to laugh at your own foibles. Gemini, Sagittarius persons are likely to be in picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do some revising, reviewing. Relative complains about financial status. Maintain equilibrium. Means don't take others — or yourself — too seriously. Dig beneath surface indications. You could strike pay dirt!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be ready for change, variety, travel, intensified relationship. Gemini is in picture — so is another Virgo. Friendship, romance, creative endeavors dominate. Be analytical. Find the reason for recent happening. You'll get at truth!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get chance to prove major contention. Family situation improves. Residence is more harmonious, beautiful. Means recent storm clouds diminish. You could enjoy sunny skies. Taurus, Scorpio are in picture — so is another Libran.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are able to break out of rut. Communication lines are cleared. Cash flow could resume. You see beyond the apparent or obvious. You gain backstage glimpse. Your ESP works overtime. Pisces is in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Build, consolidate, accept responsibility. You are rewarded for past efforts. You perceive what is to occur. Act on knowledge. Pull out of deal that has turned sour. You'll comprehend! Capricorn figures prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Study Sagittarius message. Accent on legal affairs, career, willingness to make intelligent compromise. Means listen to reason. Friend could pave way for valuable professional contact. Aries, Libra might play key roles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You're given chance to express opinions concerning policies, directions, aims and ultimate goals. Another Aquarian — and a Leo — could figure prominently. Accent on employment, basic issues and health resolutions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Costs, time and motion could command spotlight. Cancer figures prominently. You're asked to produce facts, estimates and past "track records." Your "inner voice" serves as reliable guide. Listen to it!

IF DEC. 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, independent, an original thinker, considered controversial, direct and, very often, lacking in tact. You gain wider recognition in 1976 — and August will be your most significant month. Leo and Aquarius individuals play important roles in your life.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
